Again East to West
The Reality of Drouth
Romantic Names
A Great Country

By Arthur Brisbane

LAS VEGAS, N. M., Feb. 13—This is written on the train, Westbound, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, third trip across the continent within a month. Now passing Morley, a little place in the big State of Colorado near the place where Dick Wootton built his ranch house long ago. He little thought he lived above a coal mine.

On the right of the track is a great pile of black dust. People live around that hole in the ground as ants live around a little hole in your garden path. And, most important, the biggest, finest building on a hill in the bright sunlight is the public school.

Everywhere in this Western country the school buildings are finer than any others.

On the left of the track mules gallop and buck around their corral, pointing their hind hoofs toward the sky, waiting their turn to work in the dark coal tunnels.

It is hard to realize that not long ago in Engaau women worked in coal mines with tunnels so low it was impossible to stand up. They crawled on hands and knees, dragging small coal cars attached to chains fastened around the woman's neck and passing under her body.

And it is hard to believe that in this country recently boys of grade school age worked on the breakers, with bleeding fingers, sorting sharp pieces of slate from good coal. There is progress.

Respectable New York financiers are annoyed by Western senators, clamoring for drouth relief. Drouth seems so unreal in New York, where you get anything you choose to order, alcoholic, and have the Hudson river on one side, East river on the other.

Those financiers would change their minds if they could have seen from this Santa Fe "Chief," just west of La Junta, Col., dead animals, horses, cows, calves, lying beside the fences, pitifully emaciated, killed by lack of water and pasture. Fortunately, rain is falling, snow piling up in the mountains, and farmers can look forward to a better year.

There is interest in every mile of travel across your glorious country. One hundred miles off to the north is Pike's Peak, visible on a clear day.

In the fields beside you lie thousands of black rocks, thrown up by some volcano long ago.

Names out here are romantic, thanks to the Spaniards. Earl, Col., possesses the Spanish peaks, or "Los Dos Hermanos," "The Two Brothers."

To the west is a mountain range called Sangre de Cristo, "Blood of Christ."

To the west runs the river Purgatoire, meaning "Purgatory," in French.

The honest cowboy saved time and effort, calling it "Picketwire."

Three powerful engines push and pull you up the mountain to Raton Pass. In Trinidad stands a statue of Kit Carson that would interest your little boy. He was the first farmer out in this locality.

North of the city, a mountain peak, 6500 feet high, is called "Simpson's Rest," in memory of an old pioneer who insisted on being buried on the top. Where is he now?

The Sangre de Cristo range is 14,000 feet high.

West of the track runs the Rio de los Animas Perdidas, "River of the Lost Souls," romantically named because many men were killed there by Indians.

Our American names are less romantic than Spanish names. For our mountains we choose "Eagle Tail," "Baldy," etc.

So passes the country mile after mile, the train climbing thousands of miles from the ocean on one side of us to the ocean on the other. It never grows tiresome.

Just now rain is falling over millions of New Mexico acres and each sodden shepherd, heavy coat over his head, his great band of sheep nibbling, with sheep dogs circling round, is happy. You must see all of this country. Railway rates are lower, a small automobile will carry you.

Wet members of New Mexico's Legislature have what they call a good idea. Prohibition applies only to "persons, associations, corporations and cannot prohibit a sovereign state from manufacturing and selling liquor."

On that theory they propose to spend $50,000 of state money on a brewery or distillery and set up dispensaries "wherever necessary for the convenience of the people." The creators of that pleasing theory will probably find that the Constitution of the United States applies to the states as well as to individual citizens.

The Supreme Court is on rec-

Peace Pact in North End Gang War

RIVAL CHIEFS END STRIFE AT SECRET PARLEY

Lack of Profit in the Present Rackets and Police Vigilance Force Agreement

Two North End gangs at war for the last two years signed a "peace pact" today, the Boston American learned.

Two representatives of each gang met with a common arbiter in a downtown hotel this morning and agreed to end a war which resulted in the murders of Carmello Guiffre, Samuel Guida, Morris Peter Lerner and the shooting of Guy Perrelli, alias "Young Morgan."

The importation of outside gunmen by both sides, the increasing difficulty of raising funds for legal defense and the increased vigilance of police in the North End were contributing factors.

AGREE TO END WAR.

In other words, the war had developed to a stage where it was dog eat dog, and neither gang, because of trouble with the other, was reaping profit from its diversified rackets.

Negotiations between the two factions were begun a week after the burial of Carmello Guiffre, who was fatally shot following his acquittal o fa charge of murdering Morris Lerner in the Revere gun battle.

The arbitrator made arrangements for the conference between the faction leaders and it took place in the best Chicago "gun-checked-at-the-door" style.

No actual compact in writing was signed, but an agreement was reached to end hostilities.

GANGS SPENT $40,000.

A previous meeting of the interested parties had been held in a North End restaurant.

Both Guiffre and Guida are said to have been victims of imported gunmen.

There have been no less than 20 arrests of members of both gangs within the last two years and a half on charges of gun-carrying, hijacking, robbery and murder. More than $40,000 was spent by the gangs to keep them out of jail.

YD Veteran Quick to Aid General

IRVING L. PEATFIELD of 122 Riverway answered the call for aid from his war-time leader, Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, today when the Massachusetts General Hospital, when he gave a pint of his blood to the general while the latter was on the operating table. Peatfield, who was a private in the 101st Field Artillery, was the third Y. D. veteran to aid the general in this way. (Staff photo.)

GEN. EDWARDS IS SAVED BY OPERATION

New Blood Transfusion Aids Famed YD Leader; Has Even Chance Now

Battling to save the life of Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, doctors transfused another pint of blood from a Yankee Division veteran today with the general still on the operating table, following a second major operation.

With the patient unconscious from the shock of the operation, which was performed under a local anaesthetic, the doctors hastily forced Peatfield, former member of Battery E, 101st Field Artillery, who was waiting for just such an emergency.

EDWARDS RALLIES

Peatfield was quickly placed on a bed which was rolled up close to the operating table and a transfusion was made while the donor lay and watched his wartime leader fight his way out of the shadow of death.

With the aid of this new blood the patient rallied encouragingly and the operation was pronounced successful.

An abdominal abscess was found. While the doctors say the general's condition is grave, they believe he has a chance of recovery.

The following bulletin was issued this noon at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, where the operation was performed.

"Gen. Edwards was operated upon this morning. An abscess was found in the right abdomen and pelvis, with extensive adhesions which were the evident cause of the intestinal obstruction for which the first operation was undertaken.

"This abscess was probably caused by an attack of diverticulitis or appendicitis, but this could not be definitely determined since the general's condition did not permit an extensive examination.

"No tumor of any type was discovered.

"A blood transfusion was necessary while the general was upon the operating table.

"The general's condition is very serious, but it is believed that he has a chance for recovery.

Heart Is Won by Warrior

QUEEN HELEN IN NEW ROMANCE

London, Feb. 13 (AP)—Bucharest society reports that Queen Helen of Rumania, unable to hold the love of King Carol, plans to marry a Rumania officer, Colonel Skeletti, were published here today.

Helen is said to have written Carol, whose friend the red haired Magda Lupescu, is understood to be lodged now near the royal quarters, that she will resist all his efforts to nullify the divorce she obtained from him in absentia in 1928.

While the Holy Synod of the Rumanian Orthodox Church decided that divorce null and void shortly after King Carol became king last June, it has been explained that this made it only morally non-existent, since legal annulment would have to come through the courts.

Such a marriage as is reported to be contemplated by Helen would be an almost unheard of incident in European royal circles. Helen and Carol suffered matrimonial vicissitudes from the very beginning of life together.

'Million Dollar' Rain Helps Drouth Area

Chicago, Feb. 13 (INS)—Central Illinois, one of the sections hit hardest by the drouth, today was amply relieved of an eight-months' period of aridity.

There was a steady downpour of rain for 12 hours during the night, and snow was falling this morning. The precipitation replenished wells that have long been dry and was worth "a million dollars," agrarian experts said, to late sown wheat.

BOSTON BRUINS BUY TIGERS

By BILL GRIMES

President Charles F. Adams of the Boston Bruins this afternoon announced completion of negotiations for the purchase of the Boston Tigers from Arthur H. Ross and George V. Brown.

The Bruins will acquire all of the Tigers players.

The Tigers henceforth will be known as the Bruin Cubs and will wear the Bruins' standard uniform.

Mr. Adams said the purchase was prompted by a desire to extend if possible the field of operation of the Canadian-American League, which is affiliated with the National Hockey League, and to assist in hockey development of such local talent as gives indication of being of big league material.

"Boston is unquestionably an outstanding city in hockey in America," says the owner of the two clubs. "It is quite necessary that all its clubs, professional or amateur, must rank among the leaders. I am doing my utmost for Boston hockey, both amateur and professional."

The sale of the Tigers to the Bruins was forecast in the Boston Evening American almost a fortnight ago. The exclusive story now is verified in every particular.

WOULD HIRE JOBLESS TO WAGE WAR ON MOSQUITOES

Governor Seeks Money in a Special Message; Plans a Crusade in Two Counties

Governor Ely, in a special message to the Legislature today, urged appropriation of $270,000 for mosquito eradication in Plymouth and Bristol counties to help provide work during the present unemployment emergency.

He proposed that this amount be taken out of the million-dollar emergency fund he advocated in his inaugural address. He said this would provide work for some 600 men, mostly from Fall River, New Bedford and adjacent communities. The money would be spent under supervision of the Department of Agriculture for draining wet areas by ditching.

It would call for employment of unskilled labor under the direction of experienced foremen. Governor Ely called to the attention of the State Reclamation Board that trained experts had made extensive surveys of the areas in question and recommended ways and means for eliminating the mosquito breeding places.

He estimated that there are 3000 acres of salt and fresh water marshes in coast towns in Plymouth County, while in Bristol County these breeding grounds cover 9000 acres.

Governor Ely said he wanted no expense of this work to fall wholly on the State, but that its subsequent maintenance should be handled by the cities and towns in question. He further said this was entirely an emergency measure and was not to be a precedent for further expenditures of the sort when conditions became normal.

Deputy Marshal Asa P. Barker Dies

Asa Porter Barker, deputy U. S. marshal and paymaster of the marshal's department, died at Quincy City Hospital last night after a week's illness with pneumonia. The deputy marshal was 52 years old and has served in his post since 1917 on appointment by the late U. S. Marshal John J. Mitchell. He is survived by a brother, his widow, one son, 21 years old, and twin daughters, 11 years. Funeral services will be held Monday with burial at Washington.

OILS ADVANCE IN BULL DRIVE

New York, Feb. 13—A spurt in the oils this afternoon was Wall Street's best proof that the bull move was still on." It was understood the Garner bill restricting importation of crude and refined oils had a good prospect of becoming law in the present session of Congress. If adopted, the measure will help the oil industry solve its huge over-production problem, according to observers.

The closing was irregular.

Houston led the spectacular advance in the oils, with a 9-point jump to 51. Standard of New Jersey moved up nearly 2 points to 52, and new advances of 1 to 2 points were recorded in Standard of New York, Texas Corporation and other active shares.

Beyond a 4-point jump in J. I. Case and a rise of 3¾ in Westinghouse to above 99, there was little of the spectacular jumping around which featured the first three sessions of the week.

Auburn Auto settled back to the inactive list and most of the industrial and utility stocks which burned the tape with their rapid movements on Monday and Tuesday were but seldom heard from.

Chrysler was the feature of the motors with an advance to 20¾, the highest price in six months.

Volstead, Dry Law Author, Improves

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 13 (INS)—Physicians today reported continued improvement in the condition of Andrew J. Volstead, former congressman from Minnesota, who underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis last Friday.

Carnation and Fist for Wife

Mrs. Mary Agnes Gallagher of Orchard st., Jamaica Plain, testified in Probate Court today that her husband gave her carnations on Mothers' Day, and then knocked her into a pantry.

Testifying in support of her divorce petition against William J. Gallagher of Cambridge, on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, the witness said the incident occurred on May 2, 1930.

"After presenting me with carnations," she said, "an argument arose and my husband struck me, knocking me into a dish pantry.

"I struck my head on a shelf, cutting it severely, and became unconscious. My daughter Dorothy, 13, came to my assistance while my son, William, 15, ran for a doctor. Three stitches were taken in the wound."

Mrs. Gallagher testified that four years previously "He gave me an awful licking." She said she had her husband in court as a result and he was found guilty of assault and battery.

Judge Joseph R. McCoole granted Mrs. Gallagher a decree nisi, with custody of the children.

COAKLEY TOLD TO PAY NOTES

In a decision of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today Daniel H. Coakley was ordered to pay three notes totalling $25,000 held by the Equitable Bank & Trust Co. of Florida.

This sustained the decision of the Federal District Court in November, 1929. One of the notes was for $5000, the other two for $10,000 each.

The $5000 note and one of those for $10,000 were given the Tennant Banking Co. by W. Minot Hurd, both having been endorsed by Coakley. The second note for $10,000 was given this same bank by Gael Coakley, also endorsed by Daniel H. Coakley. All three came into possession of the Equitable Bank & Trust Co.

Coakley was called upon to pay interest on the $25,000 amount at a rate of 10 per cent, together with costs.

London, Feb. 13 (AP)—Even King George is familiar with the housewife's laundry problem, but he is philosophical about it.

His majesty disclosed that all his shirts come from Belfast.

BIRTH CONTROL SUPPORTED BY NEW YORK SOCIETY WOMEN

DEFENDED AS 'ONE WAY TO END WARS'

Mrs. Sanger Among Speakers Backing Bill to Allow the Use of Literature

Washington, Feb. 13—New York city's society placed its stamp of approval on birth control today at the Senate hearing on the Gillett bill, which would permit free circulation of birth control information, now held improper and barred from the mails.

Mrs. Douglas Moffat, of New York, prominent society matron and chairman of the Junior League, testified that the Junior League "heartily endorses" the Gillett bill and its aims."

MRS. SANGER SPEAKS

She said letters had been received from local chapters of the Junior League all over the United States endorsing the bill.

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, also of New York, internationally known birth control advocate, urged adoption of the measure.

Dr. J. Whitridge William of Johns Hopkins University, cited figures to show the average number of children in a family has declined from 5 or 6 to 2.7.

"The average doctor," he said, "objects to the present law against birth control for the same reason he objects to the prohibition law and narcotic law, because it attempts to tell a physician how to prescribe treatment for his patients."

"Birth control," said Rev. Charles Francis Potter of New York, "tends to prevent war. The bird of war is not the eagle, but the stork. Nations expand beyond the ability of their own land to sustain. They demand room for expansion and the result is war. The practice of birth control enables a country to limit its population to the size indicated by its natural resources and the best health and welfare of its citizens."

WILL PREVENT WARS

He held birth control would encourage earlier marriages by dispating the fear of having children before they can be provided for properly.

"This measure will do more to prevent wars in the future and open the way for international peace," he said, "than any that could be enveloped."

The measure would authorize dissemination of birth control information, by physicians, hospitals, clinics and medical schools.

ord as in favor of prohibition and the Constitution means whatever the Supreme Court says it means.

Many Americans listening to the voice of Pope Pius on the radio yesterday probably wondered why the Pontiff spoke in Latin instead of in a modern language.

The use of Latin is typical of Vatican conservatism. The Catholic Church moves slowly and carefully, considering time by centuries, not by minutes.

Also Latin is understood by Catholic priests all over the world, and the Pope's first radio address was doubtless intended for those priests that receive and carry out his orders everywhere. No other language would be so widely understood.

The great Francis Bacon, as recently as Queen Elizabeth's time, wrote his chief work, the "Novum Organum," in Latin because he doubted the permanency of the English language and expected his work to outlive it.

His essays, to which he paid little attention, he wrote in English. Everybody reads the essays; nobody outside the learned class reads the "Novum Organum."

Prohibition authorities, raiding five fraternity buildings of Michigan University, report they found liquor in every one of the buildings, in one case "14 quarts of whiskey, 4 of gin, 3 of wine."

The amount of whiskey and gin, as compared with wine, confirms the generally accepted idea that one result of prohibition has been to substitute the worst kind of alcoholic drink for the less harmful kinds.

Whiskey is heavily alcoholic, easily concealed. Beer, the most temperate of the drinks, played a small part in the seizure.

That would interest Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, who advised the Legislature of Virginia to encourage light beer in place of the whiskey that "kills one-third of our citizens and ruins their families."

Prohibition authorities will perhaps suggest that college fraternity houses be abolished in the interest of temperance. Young men would object to that.

JEWS SEE HOPE FOR PALESTINE

London, Feb. 13 (AP)—A new government statement regarding Palestine policies in Palestine which is understood in Zionist circles to meet with the full approval of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, former president of the World Zionist organization, was made public today.

The statement took the form of a letter addressed by Ramsay MacDonald to Dr. Weizmann.

The letter deals point by point with Zionist objections to Lord Passfield's now famous White Paper which brought a furore of protest from Jews throughout the world last October.

In Zionist circles it was said the new statement places a fresh interpretation on the original document and in some points reverses it altogether.

Zionists tonight interpreted the new document thus:

The principle of estimating Jewish immigration with regard to Arab and Jewish unemployment, which was maintained in the White Paper, has been abandoned in favor of "immigration according to the capacity of the country."

This the Zionists see as implying continued Jewish labor immigration to Palestine, which the White Paper was supposed to have suspended and which caused the majority of the Zionist protests.

Another concession seen by the Zionists is that the new document defines the term, "Landless Arabs," of whom the White Paper proposed to take care of before the Jews were permitted to buy more land, as being only those Arabs who were directly displaced from land by Jewish acquisition.

Zionist circles tonight said they saw in the document as a whole a spirit of extreme friendliness to the Jews and the Jewish national home.

Dr. Weizmann said:

"Confidence in the future of Palestine should revive."

Gen. Edwards' Life Saved by Second Operation

Gen. Edwards was calm throughout the night and slept well, according to Col. John W. Hyatt, who sleeps in an adjoining room to be on hand for any need of his old commander. Dr. Rogers also spent most of the night at the hospital.

Charles A. Otis, brother-in-law of the general, arrived today from Cleveland and after a visit to the hospital, said:

"The operation was necessary because the general was slipping away fast and something had to be done. It was necessary to do something for his serious condition; he was taking no nourishment and losing strength.

"The doctors now give him an even chance for recovery and I feel they are to be complimented on the success of the operation."

turn this evening for a consultation.

Mrs. Charles A. Otis, of Cleveland, the general's sister, left the hospital feeling greatly relieved after the result was announced to her.

Gen. Edwards went on the operation table shortly after 9 o'clock this morning and was there for about an hour and 45 minutes.

Two previous gifts of blood by V-D veterans had given him the strength to withstand the ordeal, it is the opinion of the physicians, but Peatfield was asked to stand by in case of emergency.

When Peatfield was sent for and asked to hurry the very atmosphere became tense and fears were held out by those waiting on the lower floor of the Phillips House that the general was dying.

The YD man, a husky, young man with the appearance of considerable vigor, threw off his coat and hurried upstairs.

"They didn't lose any time putting me to bed," he said later. "They wheeled my bed up to the operating table so the transfusion could be done as quickly as possible. It was a harrowing experience lying there beside the old general, who looked very bad.

"My blood was drawn off into two glass tubes and given to the general. Then one of the doctors said, 'He'll rally rapidly' when he gets this blood. Everything is O. K. This ought to give him strength immediately.'

VETERAN SHOWS SCAR

"Later on, Dr. Rogers discovered that I was out of Battery A and both he and Dr. Miller had been in the same outfit, so I remarked, 'Well, the gang's all here.' They smiled and seemed greatly relieved that everything was going all right with the general."

Peatfield exhibited a scar on his left forearm which he said he prized more than any distinguished service cross that other veterans won in France. Harry Botsford of Winthrop, and Guy Watts of Roslindale, who previously submitted to transfusions, had said the same.

Peatfield is a clothing salesman for a Newbury st. concern and lives at 122 Riverway. He said he heard radio news about the first transfusion and remarked to his wife, Deborah:

"Debby, the old general needs some blood and I'm going down and give him some."

He said he was overjoyed when he learned that his blood was of the type required. The transfusion was painless but the sight of the Tyson-old "daddy" of the Yankee Division lying so helpless beside him, he said, brought tears to his eyes.

Hundreds of other YD veterans have volunteered to give blood if needed, as indications are it will be.

TWO TRANSFUSIONS

Decision to perform the second operation was reached at a consultation of doctors after two transfusions had given the patient considerable strength, besides putting him in condition to assimilate liquid nourishment.

The physicians explained that this operation would be in great part explanatory to locate the source of the intestinal block which has kept the general hovering between life and death for a month.

SON OF BOXER ASSERTS WIFE BEAT HIM

David W. Deshler, Jr., Two Other Husbands and a Woman Win Divorces

Three husbands and one wife were granted uncontested divorces by Judge John C. Leggat in Middlesex Probate Court today.

David W. Deshler, Jr., son of an old-time boxer, testified that his wife, Mabel, hit him over the head with a plateful of meatballs and made him sleep on the floor for a year when she took her sister to live with them.

She complained of having to live with a "helpless husband," he said, and pushed him down. He was given a decree on the grounds of cruelty. He lives in Douglas st., Cambridge.

BEACHMONT MAN WINS

Warren A. Berry of Winthrop ave., Beachmont, was given a divorce from Dorothy A. Berry on the same grounds.

Berry said he was greatly surprised when, shortly after their wedding in 1929, articles of furniture disappeared from the home and continued periodically to disappear until September of last year, when, with the house practically stripped of furnishings, his wife also disappeared.

She threw a small table at him once and another time upset breakfast dishes on him and a pail, he testified.

DESERTION CHARGED

John H. Sanborn of Chatlesbank rd., Newton, salesman for a wholesale grocery store, won a decree on grounds of desertion. His wife, Claire, made a trip to New York and refused to return, he said. She is now in business for herself there, manufacturing toilet preparations and has a store on Fifth ave., he testified.

Mrs. Rose Gomes of London st., Somerville, was given a decree from Ralph Gomes after she testified that he tore a new dress from her back because he didn't like it and stuck her head in a pan of water because he didn't like her permanent wave. He also blackened her eyes and hit her with a slipper, she said.

Love Calls

MRS. SOPHIA HICKEY, 49, a widow, of Cambridge, who will wed Charles Hayes, 63, widower, also of Cambridge, in "love-at-sight" romance. They have obtained a waiver to the five-day law. Their plans are opposed by relatives. (Staff photo.)

The rigors of the Lent season and "certain" relatives will both be kept away by a five-day marriage waiver taken out in East Cambridge Court by Mrs. Sophia Hickey, 49, and Charles Hayes, 63, both of 351 Green st., Cambridge.

The waiver, which will serve the two-fold purpose, allows the couple to marry whenever they so please, and it pleases them to marry some time before Lent sets in next Wednesday, they said today.

It also pleases them to keep the affair secret from relatives of the groom, who, according to Mrs. Hickey, would strenuously object to the match.

"They don't want us to marry," says Mrs. Hickey, "but we're going to do it anyway. We've both been widowed a long time and it's about time we both took the vows again."

District Attorney Foley Announces He Will Move to Increase Amount Monday

District Attorney Foley will ask increased bail for Mrs. Florence H. Garrett and Miss Lillian V. Hatch on Monday, he made known today.

While Oliver B. Garrett, former police spieler, is held in jail without bail awaiting another trial on conspiracy charges which resulted in a jury disagreement, his wife and Miss Hatch are at liberty in $500 each.

The low bail in their cases resulted from the directed verdicts of not guilty for them on certain charges during the first trial.

The district attorney notified Daniel J. Gallagher, counsel for the women, that on Monday he would place a motion before the court on the question of bail. Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle will argue for increased bonds.

In preparation for the next trial, scheduled for early April, Doyle today interviewed John F. Sullivan, the government's principal witness and claimed victim of a plot to extort.

Doyle reported to Dist. Atty. Foley that Sullivan was in good physical condition.

Other preparations for trial included questioning of three hotel men, Frank Largea, David Rhodes and Joseph Pitcher, all former employes of Sullivan's Hotel Ritz. Whether or not they will be witnesses was not announced.

The assistant prosecutor also spent an hour studying municipal court records in connection with raids by the police headquarters liquor squad of which Garrett was a member.

POPE MAY RADIO ON EASTER

Vatican City, Feb. 13 (INS)—While a decision has not yet been made, there is a strong possibility that Easter Sunday will be chosen by Pope Pius XI for his next radio address to the world, it was learned today.

A high Vatican official informed International News Service that the Pontiff definitely has decided to avail himself fully of the new means of communicating his messages to the world, but that plans for future broadcasts have not yet been completed.

Marconi Sees Big Radio Development Near

(Copyright by the Associated Press)

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—An important radio development is in the offing, its nature so far undisclosed, Guglielmo Marconi has indicated in the first radio interview ever conducted between New York and Vatican City.

Responding to questions put to him, Senator Marconi hinted that another forward step was to be taken in wireless, to which he has contributed so much since its earliest days.

The question that elicited this information was:

"What is your opinion, is to be the next important development in radio?"

"Well, I wish I could answer that important question," he replied. "Perhaps if I could, I am not sure that I would broadcast it."

He added that on a proposed visit to America next fall "I may be able to say something more."

Television development, he added, believes, depends largely on further perfection of telephonic and rapid picture transmission. He added:

"We may be very close to practical television."

Pope's Message Praised by Protestant Clergy

High praise for the first radio address of Pope Pius XI, heard throughout the world yesterday, was expressed today in Boston by leading clergymen of other denominations.

The voice of the Pope and the message it carried, brought "new hope and courage," according to one of them, and by another the Pope, through his inaugural radio address, was characterized as "a true shepherd of souls."

"Placed upon so high an elevation he can take as his survey the world and see its persons and problems in their proper relative perspective, the Holy Father in his radio broadcast yesterday displayed his conviction that the gospel of Christ is still sufficient for their solution," the Rev. James F. Malcolm-Smith, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Roxbury, observed. "He spoke as a true shepherd of souls to mankind, harassed and troubled by the difficulty which in every country has been created by the late war. To all who heard his message he brought hope and new courage to face the difficulties of the present hour."

Bishop Samuel G. Babcock, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts, considered the Pope's message "very gracious and loving." His didn't hear the broadcast, he said, but he read an account of the message in the newspaper.

"I thought it a very gracious and loving message to the world. No doubt those who heard him or read his translated message, appreciate the address," he said.

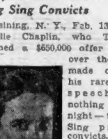
Dr. Crile said cells had been isolated from the human body and tested, just as a battery is tested, and their electric force measured.

A diseased cell can be restored to life through nutritive stimulants, just as a battery can be regenerated.

Chaplin Addresses Sing Sing Convicts

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 13 (US)—Charlie Chaplin, who Thursday spurned a $650,000 offer to talk over the radio, reads one of his rare public speeches for nothing last night—to Sing Sing prison's convicts.



Charles Chaplin

More than 1800 prisoners, many of them standing, had all but shaken the walls with laughter when the comedian showed them his latest picture, "City Lights." Then the prisoners roared, "Speech."

Chaplin left the box in which he had sat with Warden Lawes and the warden's nineteen-year-old daughter, Joan, who has been in the movies herself and shyly mounted the platform. They heard him say:

"Sometimes I wonder if my profession is worth while, but after seeing your reactions I feel it is. If I have afforded you any happiness and relaxation, I feel well repaid for coming here."

"I Wear No Man's Halter!"

A CIRCUS, A DAILY PARADE and long reels of talkies. These, in part, make up the campaign round of Mayor William Hale Thompson, who is seeking re-election as head of the City of Chicago. Daily, the so-called "circus," consisting of elephants, camels, chattering monkeys, clowning clowns and scores of trained poodles get into action. The music starts and the parade is on, through the streets and then to the north, then to the south and then to the west. The crowd enjoys the tumblers, the trapeze artists and the funsters, aplenty. In the parade Thompson's chief rival, Municipal Judge Lyle, and what he terms as his lesser adversary, Arthur Albert, are represented by riders on a mule and a donkey. Albert is the Deneen candidate. No city in the land has ever witnessed so spectacular a campaign. Recently, Judge Lyle, in making a speech, held a borrowed machine gun before him, drawing a packed audience at 25 cents per head. That's right, they have to pay to hear some political speeches in the "Windy City."

DIVORCE GIVEN BOXER'S WIFE

Rudy "Big Shot" Bauer, professional boxer, used his wife for a punching bag, she told Judge McCool today, in Suffolk Probate Court, where she was granted a divorce and custody of a daughter, Marilyn, 3.

The wife, Mrs. Gladys Bauer, 24, of Boynton st., Jamaica Plain, informe dthe court that Bauer looked upon this "punching bag" practise as good clean fun, but that his blows hurt.

Bauer celebrated June 17, 1929, by throwing a fork at her and cutting her when she asked him to take her out, Mrs. Bauer said. After he turned professional in the ring, he made $125 a fight, she testified. She sued for non-support in 1929, two years after their marriage, and was granted $10 a week.

Cruelty and abuse were grounds for the divorce.

Washington Feb. 13 (AP)—The United States is to withdraw Marines from Nicaragua.

Acceptance by President Moncada of Nicaragua of a plan to reduce marine forces in Nicaragua by June and complete withdrawal after the elections of 1932 was announced today by Secretary Stimson.

The Marines to be withdrawn by June, are those on combat duty against the insurgent forces and total about 800. The remaining marine force will be stationed in Managua, the capital, and will devote their attention solely to training purposes and as an aviation unit required in some sections due to lack of roads.

The Nicaraguan National Guard will wage a campaign against bandit forces and will increase its strength to about 2000.

FAMOUS OPERA STAR PLANNING FAREWELL

Former Melrose Diva Tells of Plans for the Future on Connecticut Soil

Geraldine Farrar, former Melrose girl and, since her retirement from opera, a star of the concert stage, is heading back to her Connecticut farm today, to remain until her farewell tour.

Next fall the famed singer will give seven concerts in the East, and these will end her public singing career, she declared in an interview today on the Pacific Coast.

But meanwhile, between now and the start of this Eastern tour, she will devote her time to the farm in Ridgefield Conn., milking cows, freckling in the sun of the hayfields—and doing those homely farm chores that are so enjoyed when one really doesn't have to do them.

QUIT OPERA STAGE

Recently—and don't ask any questions—the fiery Geraldine celebrated her 49th birthday and the ninth anniversary of her retirement from the operatic stage.

It was while in opera that she made the role of "Carmen" immortal, and although most of her other roles are dim in general memory, that exciting portrayal by Geraldine never will pass out of mind.

MADE DEBUT IN 1901

And, incidentally, since her retirement from opera, no one has been found with the fire and temperament to replace the Melrose girl in the role.

Geraldine, daughter of the old-time ball player, Sidney Farrar, made her operatic debut in 1901 and was a star more than two decades. Since her retirement from opera she has been doing concert work and has been well received.

BLAINE TO BARE CONTRIBUTIONS

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—Chairman Blaine of the Senate postal lease investigating committee said today he would produce evidence of large political contributions by postoffice lessors, despite Postmaster-General Brown's statement they have only contributed $500 since 1924.

Replying to Brown's assertion that he has "not a scintilla of evidence" to support his charges of corruption in postal leases, Blaine said the postmaster-general "after the testimony is all in will have ample opportunity under oath to rebut it."

"I decline to be drawn into a personal controversy with him," he added.

Brown charged Blaine with using his "cloak of Senatorial immunity" to deceive the American people into believing there had been widespread corruption in the "making of postal leases."

$10,000 AWARD TO WAR WIDOW

The United States government was ordered today to pay Mrs. Jennie E. Godfrey of Lynn $10,000 on the war risk insurance policy of her husband, Harry G. Godfrey, who died of tuberculosis after the war.

The federal Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the verdict of the United States District Court, from which the government appealed on the ground that Godfrey contracted his illness in a laundry.

Godfrey was employed by Fred C. Cheaver, proprietor of a Lynn laundry, after he left the army.

The upper court, in an opinion written by Judge George W. Anderson, said:

"We find that Godfrey contracted tuberculosis while serving his country in the trenches. It does not follow that he aided his employers while working. Mr. Cheaver, his employer, seems to have been unusually considerate of Mr. Godfrey. We find that Mr. Godfrey went to work when he was unable and could have remained idle as an invalid. The verdict of the lower court is sustained.

'BIG BILL' WOWS CHICAGO WITH CIRCUS

Elephant, Clowns, Poodles and Monkeys All Included in Political Stunt

By CHARLOTTE WEBB

Chicago, Feb. 13 (US)—Chicago's flair for doing things in a spectacular way reached its climax this week when "Big Bill" Thompson's circus came to town, complete from 6000-pound elephant to clowns, trained poodles and a host of chattering monkeys.

If "Big Bill's" chief rival, Municipal Judge Lyle, at first gripped the public imagination by waving a borrowed machine gun and loudly denouncing "public enemies"—none of whom he ever jailed—Thompson's circus has "wow'd 'em" as they say in the show business.

Since its opening, last Monday afternoon, thousands of Chicagoans have yielded to the blaring posters and raucous spiels of barkers outside the Cort Theater to "spend 25 cents! See ten great acts of vaudeville and learn the real issues of this campaign! Spend 25 cents—the fawth paht of the one doll-uh!"

A talkie of Mayor Thompson and a travelogue through Chicago districts improved under Thompson regime, open the show. The latter film, entitled "Chicago—Home of Thompsonism" pictures street widening projects, new bridges, and the straightening of the Chicago river.

WORKING FOR BEER

It ends with a scene in an old-fashioned beer dispensary, with the bartender working at top speed pushing the schooners across the twinkling mahogany. With this scene Big Bill's voice booms forth a promise to work for the return of good, wholesome beer, and the crowds applaud rapturously.

Tumblers, trapeze artists, waltzing poodles, prancing Shetland ponies, with monkeys scrambling about the scenery relax the audience for the next political act. In this, three characters representing the leading contenders for the Republican mayoral candidacy, ride forth upon the stage and engage in lusty repartee concerning their respective qualifications.

In his pocket was found a note reading:

"To whom it may concern: I still love my wife but she ran away with my friend Pierce. She also is a gold digger. God bless my three children."

Mrs. Browne and her lawyer, Isidore Bregoff, had called on Browne to discuss the divorce action Mrs. Browne has instituted.

"Big Bill" Thompson Wows Chicago With Circus

youth about 12 years old, almost hidden beneath a black derby, and perched atop a shaggy, sleepy little burro. The animal is led by a seedy looking individual bearing upon his back a placard reading: "Chicago Daily News." In his hand he holds one end of a rope leading to a halter about the youth's neck, emblematic of the control which, "Big Bill" charges, the newspaper exercises upon "Little Arthur" Albert, Deneen candidate.

Second of the trio is "The Judge"—pale, slightly bitter as to expression, and given to threatening his audience with high bonds if they don't stop snickering. The judge's bony, sway-backed mule is guided by a slightly cadaverous gentleman whose sagging shoulders carry the banner of "The Chicago Tribune." H., too, holds the rope of a halter about the judge's neck.

"BIG BILL" ENTERS

Finally, upon a handsome black charger, in canters the figure of "Big Bill" himself—a husky six-footer, in cowboy regalia, puffing a black cigar and waving his 10-gallon hat to the crowd.

As they face the audience, "Little Arthur" pipes up shrilly:

"I want to be mayor! I'm against Big Bill and everything he's done—but I don't care! I know he reduced milk one cent a quart—but I don't care! I know he widened the boulevards and built bridges and increased land values—but I don't care!"

Whereat Big Bill guffaws heartily, jerks a thumb at the youth and remarks jovially to his audience:

"Why, he must have been running around with Eva Tanguay when she wrote that song, 'I Don't Care.'"

The judge thereupon declares in ringing tones:

"I want to be mayor. I've rid the city of all its crooks!"

Big Bill then turns slightly in his saddle and inquires:

"You have? Well, where are the crooks?"

"Why—they're with the politicians!"

"And where are the politicians, judge?"

"Why they're with me!"

A mixture of rough humor with piercing barbs of satire and sarcasm, streaked broadly with ridicule of Big Bill's opponents, Lyle act invariably "roll 'em in the aisles."

The recent trend of popular sentiment may perhaps be judged by the fact that the day Judge Lyle orated at his fiercest, best and waved about his borrowed machine gun at a nearby theater, the circus drew its biggest audience—at 25 cents a head.

And meanwhile, the entire city is enjoying the show of its life!

BUTLER 'MADE ME GOAT,' SAYS VANDERBILT

Los Angeles, Feb. 13 (AP)—Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., today told his version of the Mussolini hi-jinx story for which Major-Gen. Smedley D. Butler was ordered to face court martial, and asserted the anecdote would have "proved merely a quip compared to issues which testimony taking would have made public" had the court martial had not been called off.

Vanderbilt said Gen. Butler "took a story of mine, twisted it around to score a point for himself and made me the goat."

"Testimony I would have given at Butler's court-martial," Vanderbilt said, "would have brought out statements made by the general at a gathering of members of the American Affiliated Lecture Bureau last November."

These statements, he said, concerned failure of a foreign power to live up to the terms of the naval pact entered into last year between the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

Vanderbilt said the third speaker at the November meeting of the lecture bureau in New York, at which he and Butler spoke, was "an official of a foreign government."

Vanderbilt's story of the Mussolini incident was as follows:

"I was riding with Mussolini, who drove. A small child ran in front of the machine at a sharp turn in the road and was hit. I looked back to see if the child was hurt. Mussolini placed his hand on my knee and said, 'Never look back, Vanderbilt, always look ahead in life.'"

Butler heard the story in a confidential meeting, Vanderbilt said.

"If I had been called to the stand I should have been prepared with 40 affidavits from persons hearing me out in my contention that General Butler misquoted me. I should have been forced to tell what the other two speakers, including General Butler, said in November.

One overt act on the part of General Butler will result in filing a legal action that will bring all these facts to light. I will not sue to collect monetary damages. The suit will be for the purpose of disclosing the manifold angels arising out of the Mussolini incident, and the other issues."

No News Good News on Some Occasions

The shortest railroad in the world has just been scrapped. It was a mile long and was used to transport war supplies on Governor's Island.

Like most governmental war projects it was built so Ripley could make a cartoon of it.

An American motor truck broke all records by carrying 10 tons up the Matterhorn. Nine tons of it was the high French tariff.

Farm rehabilitation will be a success if they save the scarecrow.

Robbers grabbed eight hundred thousand in mutilated money. It was all torn in half. The government keeps the other half of the bills as the income tax.

Sunk!

Planning... hoping ...and then—the thing she dreaded

Nature won't postpone her process to accommodate social engagements! Two weeks ago she was sure she could go. Then—just an hour before the party—it had started. That excruciating pain which is now avoidable.

Expected. Dreaded. Those muscular pains reckoned by the calendar. You can't always tell to the day and hour when they'll begin. But you can count on their relief seven minutes after taking Midol!

The periodic process is natural, but the painful part is not. Midol is non-narcotic; it never interferes with the process, but it does banish the pain. These tablets take effect in five to seven minutes. Better yet, the woman who takes them beforehand will experience no pain at all. Midol relieves headaches, neuralgia, neuritis, too. Always to be had at any drugstore.

SENATE FACES FILIBUSTER ON RELIEF BILL

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—Senate leaders announced at the outset of today's session in the face of a threatened filibuster that they would insist upon the Senate remaining at work today until a vote is taken upon the $20,000,000 drouth loan compromise.

A majority for the proposition was assured on the basis of the statement of Secretary Hyde that there could be no prohibition against the use of the loans by the farmer borrowers for the purchase of food and clothing.

As Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, began a speech which he said would be limited "only by human endurance," Senator Smoot —a Utah Republican—notified the Senate he would ask it to remain in session, until it has voted.

Senator Smoot is in charge of the Interior Department appropriations bill, to which the drouth loan compromise is attached.

It is one of the appropriation measures that must be passed before the March 4 adjournment, if an extra session of the new Congress is to be avoided.

The Senate at last appeared to have reached the cross roads on whether an extra session is to be forced and both Democratic and Republican leaders were determined to force this to an issue in a drive to avoid such a meeting.

GIRL LOSES $10 IN SWINDLE

The old flim-flam game that entails complicated changing of a large money bill worked again today—this time on 22-year-old Adele Kresky of Hollander st., Roxbury.

It netted the flim-flammer a brand new $10 bill and gave the victim $10 worth of sad experience.

Miss Kresky, cashier at a beauty shop on Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, saw no harm in a shabbily dressed stranger who bought two tubes of toothpaste and tendered a $20 bill in payment.

The stranger received his articles and $19.54 in change. Then, discovering he already had the right amount of change, he took his $20 back and laid down what Miss Kresky thought was the $19.54.

A checkup revealed the loss of $10.

grateful words for Konjola; voluntary letters telling what relief Konjola has brought after all other medicine tried have failed. Would you like to know how this remarkable medicine works? But, right now, read what a Boston Citizen has to say about this new compound. Mr. John Delifano, 24 Cummings Avenue, Boston, said to the Konjola Man:

"Konjola surely deserves praise, and I am only too glad to praise it. I suffered from liver trouble and constipation for a long time. I was forced to use harsh laxatives that brought only temporary relief. My appetite was poor, and I always felt tired and worn-out. The first bottle of Konjola helped me wonderfully. My bowels have been regulated, and I feel better in every way. That worn-out feeling is gone, my appetite has increased, and I am telling everyone to try Konjola. I think Konjola should be in every medicine cabinet."

Konjola contains no alcohol, no nerve-deadening drugs, no heart-depressing chemicals. It is all pure, wholesome medicine, compounded from the juices of 22 roots and herbs, and every drop works.

The Konjola Man is at the Epstein drug store, Epstein's, Scollay Square, Boston, where daily he is meeting those who come to ask about this remarkable medicine. Konjola is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

CHAIN STORES PAY HIGH

Wages paid to grocery store employes have increased 300 to 430 per cent since 1911 and chain store employes are the highest paid in the entire grocery business, Charles F. Adams, treasurer of the First National Stores, declared before a legislative committee on merchandise affairs at the State House.

Mr. Adams spoke in opposition to House bill 197, which seeks to regulate the operation of chain stores. A hearing on the bill was held recently and Adams asserted that it was his wish to answer every statement that had been made by proponents of the bill.

If any investigation of grocery stores is to be made, Adams told the committee that the investigation should include all stores, competing or independent, and that such an investigation should not be made of merely one branch. Moreover, he asserted definitely, the investigation should include the stores with which the chain stores are competing.

New Haven, Ct., Feb. 13 (INS)—Judge Edwin S. Thomas, of the United States District Court, today ordered dismissal of a libel against the schooner "John M. Hathaway," seized by the Coast Guard last year, and return of the "Hathaway's" cargo of liquor to its owners.

The decision declares that the "Hathaway's" liquor was taken out of St. Pierre, Miquelon, by the vessel "Fannie Powell," with the intention of carrying it to Bermuda.

The "Fannie Powell" encountered trouble at sea and signalled the "Hathaway" for aid. The "Hathaway" responded and at the owner's request took on the cargo and moved away.

MARSHAL FOCH'S WAR MEMOIRS

GERMANS IN NEW THRUST HURL ALLIES BACK TOWARD PARIS

In yesterday's instalment Marshal Foch told of his plans for meeting renewed German drives on the Western Front late in the Spring of 1918 and of the serious situation that loomed as a result of a break in the Allied line on the Aisne. Today he tells of the heavy drives of the Germans toward Paris and his steps to halt them.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH,
Commandtr-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Colonel T. Bentley Mott.

DURING THE AFTERNOON of May 27, 1918, General Petain informed me of the measures he had taken to urgently meet the grave situation in the Cremin des Dames region. Headquarters of the Fifth army, six infantry divisions, the I Cavalry Corps, composed of three divisions, four regiments of horse-drawn 75s, three regiments and six groups of tractor-drawn heavy artillery, as well as a group of air forces, were already on the move. One-half of the infantry divisions and two of the cavalry divisions would be thrown into the battle the following morning.

On May 28, the enemy brushed aside the few elements opposing him in the vicinity of Fismes, crossed the Vesle on a wide front and established himself on the high ground south of the river, without, however, seeking to push further forward.

Moreover, taking advantage of the breach in the center, he combined frontal attacks with attacks in reserve, and thus overcame the resistance encountered on the two wings.

On the East, advancing rapidly along the valleys of the Vesle and the Ardre, he forced the British I Corps back upon the heights of Chateau-Thierry and Savigny. On the west he captured from our XI Corps the high ground commanding Soissons from the northeast, and at nightfall even penetrated into that town.

It was in vain that the General commanding the French Sixth Army had flung it in front of the German battalions as they entrained. Four infantry divisions and two cavalry divisions brought into action in this way on the 28th were powerless to fill a breach which was hourly growing wider.

It was urgently necessary to bring up other forces, and General Petain informed me on the 28th at Provins that, in addition to the reserves whose departure he had reported to me the previous day, he had given orders to direct upon the army group of the North, 10 infantry divisions, four regiments of heavy artillery and three regiments of horse-drawn 75s.

He had also instructed General Fayolle to withdraw four infantry divisions from his front and to send the II Cavalry Corps towards Creil and Chantilly.

In fact, nearly every available French organization was set in motion towards the battle.

Hurls Allies Back
French Powerless to Check Germans' Onslaught

As a result of this, Field Marshal Haig, being now obliged to rely almost wholly upon his own forces to parry a possible German offensive, had to form a British general reserve capable of being thrown in at any time and place it might be required. This I requested him to do in a letter dated May 28.

I also instructed the commander of the French Tenth Army to make preparations to the end that, in case of need, the four divisions to which his army was now reduced could intervene on any part of the British front.

Finally, in order to facilitate General Petain's task of getting together all the groups that could be made available, I ordered General de Mitry to replace the extra-divisional elements of the XXXVI Corps as soon as possible at the disposal of General Headquarters, and to make arrangements for withdrawing one division from his front by extending the others.

After deliberately halting on May 28 on the high ground south of the Vesle, instead of further pursuing his advance across country the enemy, on the 29th, resumed his attack even more violently than during the previous days. On that day, his center directed a powerful thrust toward Oulchy-le-Chateau, Fere-en-Tardenois, Ville-en-Tardenois.

Encountering nothing but feeble French units which had already suffered heavily and were powerless to check him, he advanced rapidly on a front of from 15 to 20 miles, and, in the evening, reached the heights commanding the northern banks of the Marne between Chateau-Thierry and Dormans.

Similarly, his right made a vigorous effort in the region of Soissons; but here he encountered a much more solid resistance. He succeeded, nevertheless, in forcing back the French to the west of Soissons and to the high ground south of the town.

This ground was yielded along the whole of the line. The divisions sent by the Sixth Army melted away as fast as they were flung into the battle, and this army, consequently, remained in such a disquieting state of inferiority that General Petain began to wonder if he would succeed in achieving the results he aimed at, namely, to hold on to the Marne, the Montagne de Rheims and the high ground south of Soissons.

At midday on the 29th, in face of the ever-increasing development of the German offensive, he requested me to put the French and Tenth Army at his disposal and arrange for the British and Belgians to relieve the Army Detachment of the North.

I was unable to comply entirely with this request. Notwithstanding the magnitude of the attack south of the Aisne, the enemy still had sufficient troops available (30 fresh divisions in reserve) for another offensive in the Somme area and in the north.

Furthermore, I arranged with General Gillain that the Belgian Army would relieve the British left and extend its front to the Ypres, so as to increase the British reserves.

Warns Gen. Haig
Foch Fears French Lines Will Be Unable to Hold

Finally, I warned Sir Douglas Haig that the Tenth French Army might be called upon to leave the British zone. At the same time I notified him that, should the enemy bring all his available forces against the French front, I might have to call on the British general reserves which the Field Marshal had just constituted.

On May 30th, moreover, the German attacks continued with the same violence. Their main effort was still being aimed toward the center; on the one hand, in the direction of the Marne, which they reached along the whole of the front from Chateau-Thierry to Dormans; on the other, in the direction of the Ourcq and the forest of Villers-Cotterets, where the French Sixth Army marked a serious retreat.

The enemy's field of action appeared to be limited for the moment to the ground between Dormans on the Marne and Noyon on the Oise. But on this front, more than 62 miles long, the battle raged furiously.

The German Supreme Command now put in its reserves. Six new divisions from the Crown Prince of Bavaria's group of armies were identified on the 30th, and our air forces reported heavy German columns moving west in the general direction of Paris.

There remained no doubt that the Supreme Command intended to open up the road to Paris at all costs.

In fact, on May 31st, there had been desperate fighting between the Marne and the Oise. The French troops still too few in numbers, retreated for a considerable distance in the Ourcq Valley, were driven back to the edge of the Villers-Cotterets forest, while north of Soissons they were obliged to abandon the Nouvron plateau.

General Petain now urgently requested that there be placed at his disposal some of the divisions belonging to the Army Detachment of the North, and some of the American divisions undergoing training in the British Zone.

Moreover, the immediate addition of the French Tenth Army and of two more trained American divisions (3rd and 5th) to the northern group of armies, added to the divisions which General Petain had withdrawn from the reserve and from the Eastern Group of Armies, enabled the situation in my opinion to be restored; provided always that a clear line of conduct was laid down for each and all; that corresponding orders were drawn up, and that they be executed with the greatest energy.

In my view, this was the predominating factor in the situation and this alone would enable the crisis to be conjured. I stated it plainly to General Petain and to General Duchesne at Trilport on the afternoon of the 31st.

Wants U. S. Aid
Petain Urges Americans Be Sent to Halt Foe

The same day, the 31st, Field Marshal Haig came to see me at Sarcus. I spoke to him regarding the possible employment in French sectors of the American divisions undergoing training with the British Army, regarding possible withdrawal of two divisions from the Army Detachment of the North, and the help which the British Army might be called upon to furnish in the event of a powerful offensive against the French front; hence the preparations which should now be made for sending this help if it became necessary.

On June 1, the enemy continued his attacks without a pause and made further important progress, both between the Marne and the Ourcq and foward the forest of Villers-Cotterets, whose eastern edge he reached.

General Petain considered that urgent measures were more and more necessary in view of the gravity of the situation. He wrote to me again, reiterated the difficulty he was experiencing in sustaining the battle, and renewed his requests of the previous day regarding the American and British divisions.

He forwarded with this letter a report from General de Castelnau, informing him that, if the Germans attacked in force on the front of the eastern group of armies, at this moment denuded of all reserves, he would have no other course open to him but "to retire as rapidly as possible the divisions which were not attacked, re-group them, and manoeuvre to detain the enemy while waiting for better times."

All this clearly showed a want of confidence, such as I had called attention to, especially during my talk at Trilport, on May 31 and the same symptoms I had already observed during the preceding weeks, and under similar circumstances, among some of the British. It once more became necessary for me to put a stimulant into our energies.

On June 2, after an interview with General Petain, at Pompponne, I left the following note, which summarized our conversation:

1. The line of conduct to be followed by the French command is to stop the enemy's advance on Paris at all costs, especially in the region north of the Marne.

2. The means consists in a loot by loot defense of the territory in this direction, pursued with the utmost energy.

3. To accomplish this, it is essential that orders be drawn up presenting exactly what the troops must do, and see that these orders are strictly carried out, by removing any commanding officer who shows signs of weakness.

And, in order to restore confidence, I added:

4. All the Allied troops are oriented in the same direction and they will be put into the battle as resources of transportation become available.

Moreover, I took important steps to carry out this promise.

In agreement with General Pershing, it was decided that five American divisions, then in training with the British Army, should be sent to the French front to relieve French units in quiet sectors, thus making the latter available for the battle.

Field Marshal Haig was requested to move three divisions of his general reserve by route march to the west of Amiens, where they would be in a position to act either in support of the British Army, or, if need be, in support of the French Army. Finally, in order to be nearer French General Headquarters, I established myself first at Mouchy-le-Chatel (June 1), then at Bombon (June 8).

Moreover, the arrival of large French reinforcements, a judicious redistribution of our command on the field of battle added to the adversary's fatigue, tended more and more to stabilize the situation between the Oise and the Marne.

As early as June 2 and 3 the Germans had been advancing only with difficulty south of Soissons, and on June 4, upon encountering a solid front, they ceased their attacks.

Another battle was being prepared west of the Oise, between Noyon and Montdidier.

LEADERS WORK FOR RED CROSS

MRS. WADSWORTH MRS. BELMONT MRS. SALTONSTALL

MRS. ELIOT WADSWORTH, Mrs. August Belmont and Mrs. R. M. Saltonstall at the Junior League yesterday, when Mrs. Belmont gave an address in behalf of the American Red Cross. The meeting was held to explain the Red Cross drouth relief stand.

Mrs. Belmont Addresses League on Red Cross

MRS. AUGUST BELMONT gave a brief address at the Junior League yesterday afternoon in behalf of the American Red Cross. Mrs. Belmont is a member of the central committee of the organization and is an authority on Red Cross activities, having served on the board since the war.

MRS. EDWARD H. WARREN, president of the Junior League, presided, and introduced Mr. James J. Jackson. He gave a short talk before presenting Mrs. Belmont. The gist of his remarks was that this appeal to the American public was different than any previous appeal because of the question which has arisen in Washington as to whether or not the government should provide funds for relief. Can we establish the precedent of allowing the government to dispense charity, or shall it be done through the proper channels and the American Red Cross? Should the government support the people, or should the people support the government, he quoted from former President Cleveland.

MRS. BELMONT, SMARTLY gowned in free-green ensemble, was effective. She stressed the point that the Red Cross, in refusing to accept 25 million dollars offered to them by the government for relief of needy Americans, only carried out the spirit of the Red Cross which is volunteer service and voluntary contributions from all Americans for emergencies, such as floods, tornadoes, earthquakes, wars, and the present drouth situation in the Southwest.

TO ATTEMPT TO RELIEVE the present unemployment problem, or nurse the sick, dependent or aged, everywhere—which could be applied for if the $25,000,000 were accepted with no stipulation as to where it was to be used—would in effect be turning the Red Cross into a national charitable organization, too stupendous a task to even attempt, Mrs. Belmont said. Therefore, the American Red Cross is appealing to the public for money to relieve the drouth situation, which is acute, and comes under the scope of disasters.

AMONG THE INTERESTED people who attended were Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mrs. James Jackson and her daughter, Miss Rachael; Mrs. R. M. Saltonstall, Mrs. F. L. Higginson, Jr., Miss Isabella Grandin, Miss Harriet White, Miss Rachael Warner and many other Junior Leaguers

Dr. Lewis Parry to Address Parents' League on Feb. 19

THE PARENTS' LEAGUE have sent out invitations to a lecture at the Women's Republican Club on Thursday, February 19, at 8:45 p. m., by Dr. Lewis Parry, president of Phillips-Exeter Academy, on "Things Learned From English Public Schools." Dr. Parry will make comparisons between the English and American public schools' systems and will outline the new plan for Exeter. Tickets may be be obtained from Mrs. Roger L. Lee, 288 Warren st., Brookline, or at the door.

QUITE THE SMART THING next week will be the French talking picture, "Under the Roofs of Paris," shown at the Fine Arts Theater. Members of Le Cercle Francaise and many others who speak the French language will attend.

THE PROVINCIAL MEMBERS of the Junior League turned in early last night that they might be refreshed for their examinations for election this morning. A 65 or better is required for passing and the debutantes have been very faithful in their attendance and studies to gain the coveted honor.

MRS L. CLARK WINTER has been visiting her mother Mrs. Auguste, in New York, returning today to attend a dinner this evening in her honor by Mrs. William Henry Brown.

Young Married Set Hold Supper Dance in Salem Tonight

AN EXCLUSIVE LITTLE supper dance will be given this evening in Salem by the members of the young married set, under the arrangement of Francis Tuckerman Parker, in Abbott Memorial Hall. This is the second in a series and is under the auspices of the social service committee of Grace Church. The supper committee is composed of Mrs. John T. Whitmore, Mrs. William M. Page and Mrs. Francis T. Parker. Marian Chase and her orchestra will supply the music.

THE ROUND TABLE MET last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Moors, 71 Beacon st., to hear Col. Thomas G. Frothingham, newly elected president of the Copley Society, tells of his experience abroad during the war.

MISS RACHAEL JACKSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Jackson, whose engagement to William Felton was recently announced, has decided on Saturday, May 16, as her wedding day.

MRS. J. PARKER BREMER is giving a dinner and theater party this evening for her debutante daughter, Miss Barbara.

Six New Directors Elected by Y.W.C.A.

An industrial secretary is to be added to the staff of the Boston Young Women's Christian Association, March 1, according to an announcement made by the president, Mrs. C. Douglas Mercer at the annual membership dinner of the "Y."

In reviewing the work of the Boston "Y," Mrs. Mercer optimistically insisted that the best days of the organization have not yet been passed. She stated that its association was 83 per cent self-supporting.

More than 4000 girls and women have had medical examinations during the past year under the auspices of the health education department, it was reported.

On an amendment, the board of directors of the "Y" is to number 36 instead of 30. These women were elected to the board to complete the quota: Mrs. George W. Brewster, Mrs. Harold B. Crunshaw, Miss Emma C. Farwell, Mrs. James C. Foss, Miss Miriam E. Phipps and Mrs. Harold C. Stuart.

Jewish Women and Juniors to Debate

A joint meeting of the Boston Section, National Council of Jewish Women, and the Boston Section, National Council of Jewish Juniors, will be held Sunday at Ohabei Sholem Temple Center, Brookline, at 8:15, featured by a debate on the "World Court."

Mrs. Walter Bieringer and Mrs. Lyman Lehrburger will debate the affirmative side. The negative will be upheld by Jackson Holtz and David Rose of the Juniors. Judge Jacob J. Kaplan, Judge A. E. Pinanski and Judge Francis Winer are to be the judges.

What Colors Combine With Blue?

By ANN ARDEN

MODEL from THE WOMEN'S SHOP OF DELANO—American Stat Photo

EVERYONE IS going to be bothered by this question because it is to be a blue spring—at least in the daytime. Therefore, you'll probably start your wardrobe with a navy blue coat. If it is a very dark blue, almost black, chose a dress or blouse in one of the misty shades—a gray, an off-white pinky tone, a clear yellow, or one of the light gray-greens.

IF YOUR coat is a bright navy, then use a very light chartreuse, one of the egg-shell tones or white.

* * *

IF IT is a real navy, a frock of raspberry red is smart and new. Or a blouse in a very light gray-blue is good, and so is watermelon pink, and yellow beige.

* * *

THE MATERIAL that fashions a coat more or less decides its use. Tweeds, as everyone knows, are all over the place. Monotone or two-toned for sportswear, you will see tweeds are most popular and many fashioned of the new lacy, loosely woven tweed, also light weight worsteds, jerseys and flannel. For more formal wear suede-finished fabrics and some dull broadcloths are used.

INSOUCIANT young things, who like clothes of tailored trigness, will wear the scarf coat such as the model pictured, which would prove a boon companion for travel by air, land or sea; on the campus; or for a busy morning in town. Admiralty blue tweed is the material—a brighter than navy blue—and the tailoring is quite perfect. The belt is of the material, with blue buckle, the sleeves have gauntlet cuffs, buttoned, and the new scarf collar is buttoned close to the throat, or may be left open to form a rever-like line. The hat is of blue felt, its brim dipping on sides, the crown band, and ornament center back, of double-faced ribbon, light and dark blue.

HAVE YOU wondered about scarfs—whether or not they will prevail as smart trimmings on spring frocks? The answer is that they will, the Ascot tie variety being especially popular on jackets. Two and three-color combinations—in bands and appliques—will again be in good standing.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WLEX.

LOVED LOBSTERS BUT SUFFERED IF HE ATE THEM

"I like lobsters better than most any food, but I used to suffer when I ate them," says Edward J. Owens, well-known salesman of 86 Falmouth St., Boston, Mass.

"I tried many things before my druggist persuaded me to take some Pape's Diapepsin.

"It took me right out of my trouble. I have a better appetite, eat lobsters, pork or anything I want and have no after-effects. I believe in Pape's Diapepsin and recommend it to everyone I know."

If you suffer from indigestion, often or just occasionally, get a package of these candy-like tablets from your druggist. They stop heartburn, gas on stomach, belching, nausea, headaches or any other symptom of indigestion soon as the trouble starts. They are harmless; form no habit; can be taken as often as needed.

35,687 SEIZED IN RUM CASES

Washington, Feb. 13 (INS)—Federal officers arrested 35,687 persons for violation of the prohibition laws between June 30 and February 1, the Department of Justice announced today.

PASTOR SENT TO JAIL FOR YEAR

New Bedford, Feb. 13—An aged ex-slave of the South who built up an estate of $14,000, was responsible indirectly, today for sentencing of a Methodist-Episcopal minister to a year in jail.

Rev. Charles B. Crawford, 42, former pastor of the Bethel A. M. E. Church of New Bedford, received that sentence in Superior court after pleading guilty to an indictment charging larceny of $3000 from the estate of Stephen Henry Brown, the ex-slave.

When Brown died he left an estate of $14,000 and the Rev. Crawford, now pastor of a church in Providence, was appointed executor.

The minister said when he took over the church at Providence it was in debt and he "borrowed" $3000 from the estate, hoping to get it back through church collections.

The growth of butter sales has been one of the outstanding features of our business. Day by day, steadily, consistently the demand for Brookside butter grows larger. So when we say it is better butter we are reflecting public opinion. Butter is largely a question of taste. Brookside is better butter for New England people because we have succeeded in capturing a flavor that is particularly pleasing to New England taste.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT OF IT

This is Judge J. Dashaway Somethingorother who is, so far as our trained investigators are able to find out, the first judge to jail himself for contempt of his own court.

This interesting incident occurred after a beautiful young lady was awarded $50,000 heart balm. After she departed the judge suddenly discovered he had failed to obtain her telephone number.

And young men who use drug store telephone booths to talk to their girl friends are not nearly so young when they step out.

And Moronia has bounded in to say she's going out tonight to get liquidated.

Picture shows Congressman Frisby preparing for his national telephone hookup, over which he hopes to settle a number of questions, either pro or con. "I have been informed," says Frisby, "that the people in South Dakota are in an awful state. I am told they are burning corn instead of coal. I happen to know that corn also burns. Perhaps the best solution for our difficulties is a corn solution." Frisby created quite a sensation in the House of Representatives yesterday when he took off his shirt to show the galleries that at least one man in Washington had some back-bone.

And it should be pretty apparent by this time that we haven't enough better instincts to take care of all the appeals to them.

"Furthermore," says Genevieve the kitchen cynic, "you can materially reduce your rights by giving them the proper amount of exercise."

New Feature in Hotel Bradford

The Hotel Bradford will inaugurate an entirely new entertainment feature for a Boston hotel when Joe Frisco, international humorist and dance comedian, opens a two-weeks engagement in the main dining room at the after-supper dance, Saturday evening, Feb. 14.

This will mark Frisco's first appearance outside a theater. He comes here after having fulfilled an engagement in New York.

Frisco, during his Hotel Bradford engagement, will be assisted by Miss Rita Garita, a famous dancer, who appeared in the follies and also by Leo Reisman's Hotel Bradford Orchestra.

THE NEGLECTED DEBUTANTE

The society columns referred to her as "one of last season's buds." Other girls her age married and set up homes. While she was left to face the future alone. Yet it had only known in time. . . .

Too often, really charming girls allow poisons of constipation to take the bloom from their cheeks, to bring the pimples and wrinkles that age complexions.

Constipation is so much more prevalent among women, so much more difficult for them. What a pity when prevention is so easy. Simply eat a delicious cereal.

Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, eaten daily, are guaranteed to prevent and relieve both temporary and recurring constipation. In severe cases, use with each meal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN sweeps the intestines clean of all poisonous wastes. How much better than taking habit-forming pills and drugs.

Serve Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with milk or cream, fruits or honey added. Use for making fluffy bran muffins, breads, omelets, etc. Look for the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

'ALL MEN OF 40 DRUNK ONCE'

London, Feb. 13 (AP)—Edwin Scrymgeour, prohibitionist member of the House of Commons from Dundee, again tried to push a prohibition bill through the House today.

The House went into gales of laughter as Scrymgeour quoted Gilbert K. Chesterton as doubting the accuracy of statistics of drunkenness because they refer only to the [illegible] "Every [illegible] man who has reached the age of 40 who has not been drunk at some time or other; when a man of good position is helplessly drunk he is put into a cab and sent home and does not become a statistic."

HOY PICKED FOR POLICE CAPTAIN

Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman announced today that he would promote Lieut. James J. Hoy of Athens street station, South Boston, to a captaincy and place him in charge of City Point station, South Boston.

From City Point station, Hultman said, he will move Capt. Perley S. Skillings to Brighton station, to the vacancy caused by the death of Capt. Samuel Dunlap, because Skillings is familiar with the new signal service system that will go into operation next week in Brighton.

The new signal service does away with police duty calls, placing the street officers on their honor, but if a signal light should flash at a box at a signal from the station the officer is required to answer it within a certain time.

Citizens' keys will hang from each box, enabling any citizen to send a call to the station.

MOVIE BEAUTIES ELOPE BY AIR TO BEAT LAW

Los Angeles, Feb. 13 (AP)—It's impossible to get married on the spur of the moment in California.

But since a law became effective July 19 1927 requiring the filing of a three days notice of intention to wed, nearly 20,000 couples have "eloped" to nearby states and Mexico.

Airplanes have whisked several impatient Hollywood stars to marriage license bureaus in other states and back again. Among these were John Gilbert and Ina Claire, who flew to Las Vegas Nevada, for their wedding

PLANES AID CUPID

More than 2500 couples a year who apply for California licenses do not return for them. Of the 80,154 licenses issued in the state in 1930 20829 were for Los Angeles county. Of the county's total 1156 were never called for.

Most of the film elopements have been to Las Vegas or to Yuma Ariz. Bill Boyd and Ivora Sebastian recently flew to Las Vegas were married and returned the following day.

Loretta Young and Grant Withers flew to Yuma. Ruth Mix daughter of the cowboy film star and Douglas Gilmore screen actor also went to Yuma. Miss Mix was but 17 and Mr. Gilmore. Mrs. Young, mother of her daughter, eloped telegraphed the sheriff to halt the marriage, but the message arrived too late.

Priscilla Dean, screen player, and Leslie Arnold, aviator, were married in Agua Caliente, but were compelled to separate a short time afterward when the Georgia State Supreme Court reversed a divorce decree Arnold had obtained from his first wife

HEIR IN ELOPEMENT

Other persons have avoided the publicity of the three days' notice by obtaining licenses in adjoining counties. Michael Cudahy, heir to a meat packer fortune, and Muriel Evans, screen actress, were married in Riverside, Cal

Young Cudahy had attempted to marry Mary Astaire, an actress, in Santa Barbara, January 5, 1927 a few months before the new law was passed. Mr. John Cudahy his mother, invoked the aid of the sheriff to prevent it.

"It was just the bad end of a New Year's celebration," Mrs. Cudahy explained

Proponents point to the number of persons who change their minds after applying for licenses as evidences that the law is successful in preventing impulsive marriages

Planes Speed Film Stars to Altar on Wings of Love

CALIFORNIA'S three-day law didn't bother Dorothy Sebastian and Bill Boyd when they wanted to wed in a hurry. They hopped a plane, flew to Arizona and—presto—it was done. They were among filmland's most recent "air elopers."

LORETTA YOUNG, Hollywood star, who also rode the sky line to the altar. Circumventing California's three-day law, she flew to Yuma, Ariz., with Grant Withers and then flew right back, happily and speedily married.

MICHAEL CUDAHY and Muriel Evans, who avoided publicity under the three-day law by secretly hopping over into another county and getting married before any of the home town folks knew of their plans.

Dentist Appeals Jail in Auto Death Case

Dr. Martin J. GREATER BOSTON NEWS — BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN — 2nd SECTION

Colt Gets New Clue in Girl's Death

CHAPTER 24

Case Near Solution

I THINK the Geraldine Foster case really began to be solved that night. More I think the first glimmer of the final solution came to Thatcher Colt as, an hour after dinner, we left Police Headquarters, and walked down the vaulted passage-way, the echo of our foots'eps resounding down the range of pillared arcnas. I knew that Thatcher Colt's mind was still busy arranging a conspectus of the various puzzling features in the case, as we entered the department car and Neil McMahon received a brief instruction where to take us

"So far as the public is concerned," said Colt, suddenly breaking silence, "Dougherty has a more convincing case than ever. He can smell Doctor Maskell burning in the electric chair. The victim—a girl, the standard bearer of American womanhood, fighting to save her honor. The accused—the pampered son of a wealthy man, the heir to millions of dollars. This is Dougherty's opportunity to be Governor of New York. He will pawn his soul to prove Maskell guilty. What a bonne bouche it would be for the reporters, if they knew what we were up to—they would scream in headlines that Dougherty and I were in a death struggle for political honors. Not one reporter would be willing to believe that the only motive in the mind of the Police Commissioner was to see justice done."

And, after a moment, he added, with a chuckle.

"Yet I took the trouble to ask Doctor Maskell for the name of his barber! And he did not even thank me!"

Good Nature

By this time we had reached the outlying frontiers of Greenwich Village. At the place where Fourth Street crosses Seventh Avenue in the drunken criss-cross of the Village highways, we left the car and proceeded on foot. The Commissioner led halfway down the block to a thick round pole, painted with red and white stripes, and surmounted by the blue globe of an electric light —the stanpoet of a basement barber shop.

We descended and found the shop deserted of customers. The barber, a diminutive Italian with black curls, volcanic eyes and an impertinent black moustache, was reading an account of Doctor Maskell's arrest.

Calmly, Thatcher Colt sat down in the chair and asked for a hair trim and shave while I crouched in a chair and fingered a copy of Liberty magazine

"Good evening!" said the barber, adjusting a cloth around the neck of the Police Commissioner. "It is a very nice night."

This point Thatcher Colt conceded with affable good nature. Encouraged by his friendly customer, Marinelli, the barber, like so many of his tribe became talkative, and launched into a bitter denunciation of the new traffic system, never dreaming that its author lay just beneath his razor. The Police Commissioner, by grunts and other sounds, continued to agree with him through the lather. But at the first opportunity, Colt managed to defend his office by pointing to the efficiency of the Department in clearing up the Foster murder.

"Ah," said the barber, "but that is too very sad

"Sad!" How so?"

"That Doctor Maskell. He is one of my best customers. He come here often. He is one fine man. But he is cursed by charm. He is too damn attractive to the girls."

Thatcher Colt nooded under the lifted blade.

"It's a great way to be cursed sometimes," he jested.

"No. It was the doctor's ruin. Poor doctor. The women followed him."

"Followed him?"

"Yes, yes Even into my shop they followed him

I bent low over the magazine I pretended to read

"So the women followed the

Woman in Taxi Death Still Remains a Mystery

POLICE HAVE NO CLUE TO IDENTITY

Took Stricken Man to Hospital and Vanishes Without Giving Her Name

The identity of a well-dressed young woman, who accompanied James H. Gallivan, 55, of Elm st., Jamaica Plain, to the Forest Hills Hospital in a taxicab just before he died, last night, continued today to mystify the police.

Gallivan died of heart disease in the cab while he was being examined by Dr. Harold Marks of the hospital staff, who had been summoned by Gallivan's frantic companion

The woman was about 30, Dr. Marks said, a brunette, and expensively attired in black. He said she wore a large diamond and a wedding ring. She told him Gallivan's identity and address, but refused to give her own name and hurried away.

STRICKEN IN CAB

Gallivan was a civil engineer of the New Haven Railroad. He was married and the father of two children.

Harold W. Covell of Benham st., Medford, driver of the cab, said he picked up his fares in the South End and was ordered to drive to Cleary sq., Hyde Park. Near there, he said, Gallivan became ill and the woman ordered him to drive to a drugstore. He could not immediately locate one and so drove to the hospital.

Dr. Marks said:

"I was standing in the lobby of the hospital when the woman rushed through the door and said, 'There is a gentleman out here in a taxi who is in a pitiful condition.'

R. 'USED TO GIVE NAME.

"I went out. Gallivan was gasping his last few breaths. Because of the way the woman came in I became suspicious that perhaps something might be wrong about the case.

"The woman said, 'Is he dead?' and I said he was. She walked around to the other side of the cab and I went in to get my stethoscope and ordered a male nurse to keep her here till I returned.

"When I got back and examined the victim and was positive he was dead I asked her if she knew him. She said, 'No, I don't know him,' and then, 'Oh, yes, I do. His name is James Gallivan and he lives on Elm st., Jamaica Plain.

"I asked her to come inside the hospital and she said she had an appointment and couldn't wait. It isn't necessary for you to know my name,' she said, and walked hurriedly away. Of course, we could not forcibly detain her. I gained the impression she was a widow."

Woman Held as Thief Has $1500 in Banks

A department store saleswoman, charged with larceny from her employers, for whom leniency was sought in municipal court today on the ground that she was sole support of a family, was found to have $1500 in a bank.

The defendant was Miss Helena B. Sullivan of Portland st., Cambridge, found guilty by Judge Goode of larceny of merchandise valued at $381 from a downtown store. She was given a year's probation on agreement to make restitution of $381.

The GLOVER MYSTERY

HATTIE LE BLANC — CLARENCE GLOVER

BACK IN 1909, Hattie Le Blanc sprang into the limelight following the mysterious death of Clarence F. Glover, wealthy Waltham laundry proprietor. Hattie, a native of West Arichat, Nova Scotia, was tried on a murder indictment and found not guilty.

A CHILD BATTLES TO BEAT CHAIR

A Reporter's Story of the Famous Hattie Le Blanc Case

By HARRY A. BENWELL

(Who worked on the case as a reporter.)

Following is the second case in a gripping series of articles on famous New England murders appearing daily in the Boston Evening American.

THROUGH THE inexplicable meddling of fate, Hattie Le Blanc, an obscure little Cape Breton servant, a descendant of the Acadians, became at the age of 16 the most talked of person in eastern United States and Canada. Arriving here in her early 'teens, with no knowledge of English, this girl from West Arichat, Nova Scotia, was suddenly transformed into the dramatic figure in one of the most sensational murder trials in the annals of New England courts.

A bewildered, shrinking, pitiful child, Hattie was forced to battle for her life as the alleged slayer of Clarence F. Glover, wealthy Waltham laundry proprietor, and husband of her employer.

For many months the white light of publicity beat pitilessly on the little Breton peasant, and millions of words were written about her in newspapers and magazines

DRAMATIC ELEMENTS

From a newspaper standpoint the case was one of the type which contains practically every quality necessary to make it a perfect story, and they devoted thousands of columns to it.

It was a murder with a woman element, the identity of the slayer was a mystery, and the case was replete with dramatic situations, sensational incidents and human interest.

The ensuing trial was a titanic legal battle staged in the forum of Middlesex County courthouse, with the presiding judge frequently taking an active part in the proceedings and an army of newspaper readers following every move closely.

"ANOTHER WOMAN"

Hattie Le Blanc was born in an overcrowded cottage in the bleak confines of West Arichat, Nova Scotia, one of a large brood of French children, the progeny of Abram and Mary Le Blanc.

West Arichat was largely made up of rock-strewn fields sloping back from the harbor, with the few tiny houses of the natives, a store and the big white church presided over by the good Pere Robertaille.

Not a pleasing outlook for a child so that when a summons came from a relative, Mrs. Lillian Glover of Waltham, also a native of the little Breton town, to become a housemaid, Hattie accepted with alacrity.

Her two older sisters, Irene and Lillian had been working near Boston for some time, and the letters they wrote home had filled Hattie with an intense longing to follow them

So Hattie went to Waltham and made her home with the Glovers. At first she was very happy, doing housework, learning to speak English, and attending church.

Then fate stepped in and changed the girl's whole life.

HATTIE MISSING

On the night of Nov. 20, 1909, Clarence Grover, husband of the woman who had brought Hattie to Waltham, staggered into the office of a physician in that city, mortally wounded.

Before he died Glover made a statement in which he said he had been shot in the office of his laundry nearby. He mentioned Hattie Le Blanc, who had just turned 16, and made a vague reference to "another woman"

Then the hunt was on. In a few hours Waltham fairly swarmed with newspapermen and women. Where was Hattie? The police were seeking her but she was not to be found. The murder weapon, one of Glover's own guns, had been picked up near the laundry by a citizen. Mean ance Glover, tight-lipped and grim, gave the interviewers little information.

The reporters, busily searching for any news which might throw light on the crime, discovered certain interesting facts. They found that the laundryman had been forcing his attentions on "the servant in the house." They also learned that Mrs. Glover had dis-

"I guess not, your honor," said Burns. "It's Friday, the 13th, and that's an unlucky day."

"Well, responded the court, "the usual fine is $10, but because it's Friday, the 13th, I'll make it $5."

The check was drawn on the Old Colony Trust Co., where, the police superintendent said, he has no account

"Believe me," said the police superintendent, "I only wish I was wealthy enough to give the Red Cross $100,000 for relief work, but this check is rather a low joke by someone."

GODFREY L. CABOT GIVES LIE TO CHARGE HURLED BY LEHAN

ENTERS INTO CAMBRIDGE DISPUTE

Former Mayoralty Candidate Denies Ever Filing False Election Returns

Godfrey L. Cabot today branded as "a lie" the charge voiced yesterday by Henry F. Lehan, Cambridge city treasurer, that Cabot had made a false election return following his defeat in a Cambridge mayoralty contest years ago.

Lehan's accusation was hurled at the State House during his opposition to Mayor Richard M. Russell's bid which would allow the mayor to replace him without reference to the City Council. The council has consistently hooked such a move.

"Lehan's statement that I filed an election return that was false on the face of it is a lie," said Cabot. "What he says about me doesn't matter in the least. It is of no interest, whatsoever."

DEATH MAY AID 'DUKE' TO WIN

As he lived, so is he dying—the Duke Philippe de Clamecy d'Aubigney snapping his fingers disdainfully at society, flaunting a bogus career in the face of officialdom.

The "Duke" lies today at the point of death in Chelsea Marine Hospital, apparently his grave will be at the United States of Lawrence.

The fake nobleman widely honored before being stripped of his false glamor, was to have been deported.

Taking him at his own word, that he was a distinguished foreigner, officials said they would "put him on a ship" and they smiled about it. But the last laugh evidently will be d'Aubigney's.

The "Duke" he was also an explorer, aviator, inventor, author and some other things all imaginary—was wined and dined in Boston in 1911, when he arrived, supposedly as representative of France, to study municipal affairs.

Other cities honored him, too, until a Cambridge girl whom he had wed, bailed him into court for desertion and abandonment of their five-year-old child. He served a term and was locked up a second time for violation of his parole, and when he was released this time the immigration authorities went after him. But his illness sent him to the hospital.

Soon after the two men with several others appeared at the house and proceeded to wreck it with sledge hammers and picks. Bricks were hurled through windows, injuring Charles Wax. Money was also taken.

DANGER LURKS IN PRISON CHAPEL

(This is the fourth in the series of articles revealing conditions at Charlestown State Prison.)

By ALAN FRAZER

Four faces look down from the walls of the State Prison chapel. The Savior, Mary, Lincoln and Washington.

On Armistice Day, 1928, they gazed on the murderous attempt of Charles Trippi to escape. Any Sunday they may be silent witnesses of a more appalling tragedy, equaling that at Columbus, O., which killed 300 convicts.

The chapel is the worst fire trap I have seen in 10 years of newspaper work, and it is only one of the ghastly hazards at the Charlestown institution.

FIRE HAZARD GREAT

A burst of flame from the motion picture booth at the rear of the balcony, and the chapel, with 900 prisoners jammed into space designed for half that number, would change into an arena for a desperate fight for life.

A fight of nearly 1000 men inspired by the instinct of self-preservation. A battle to get through the little doorway and down a steep, narrow flight of steps to the cell blocks below.

The whole interior is inflammable, wooden benches, flooring, woodwork from wainscoting to roof, and wooden beams.

And it is situated like a trap high up under the cupola which marks the State Prison for the thousands who pass daily on their way to the city from the north.

Besides the fire danger the chapel is a construction hazard. It was not built to hold so many, as who knows the strength of the floor and balcony after more than 12 decades.

As a fire menace, the workshops are a close second to the chapel. They house quantities of inflammable materials. The floors and benches are of wood. Yet the buildings are of antique second class construction, ripe for conflagration.

Should fire break out with the inmates at their benches, scores would have to leap for their lives from second and third story windows.

Another fire trap is the old schoolroom, where 60 convicts sleep, their cots on a wooden floor, surrounded by wooden furnishings.

More than three times that number are penned up in the Cherry Hill cell building, where the flooring is of wood.

WARDEN'S CURE

I asked the warden what he would do in case of fire, the threat of which is so ever-present.

"Herd them into the cell blocks," he replied. "They're built of stone and can't burn. Safest place in the world."

But what of the smoke, if the wind carried it into those cell buildings? What of prisoners if trapped by flames in the chapel dormitories or shops? Fireproof construction and establishment of the whole prison at Norfolk, to terminate overcrowding, is the one solution.

At Charlestown there are too many places, such as the paint shop, where fire could easily break out and belch smoke into all the structures so closely packed in the cramped quarters of the prison site.

Nestled about this fire hazard are the dwellings of many families. The whole community would be endangered if fire started and rioting and escapes followed.

Warden Hegarty told me he hopes to get funds with which to reconstruct the Cherry Hill floors with fireproof material. He has had sprinklers put in the old school room and in a small section of the shops. He has had two 12-inch mains run into the yard.

All these steps were the result of the Ohio State Prison conflagration. And they haven't scratched the surface of the danger for nothing can, in that ancient plant.

(In tomorrow's Boston Evening American, further revelations of conditions at the Charlestown State Prison will be published.)

Won't Wed Him Now

STUDENTS VISIT AMERICAN PLANT

Students of the Harvard Graduate school of Business Administration were guests of the Boston Evening American on a tour which enabled them to see the mechanical and editorial departments of the newspaper.

Prof. John Gurney, head of the department of industrial management, accompanied the students. Department heads in each of the rooms explained the work and their supervision.

Wollaston Park Plan Is Opposed

Creation of an 85-acre park at Squantum st. and Wollaston boulevard, Wollaston, from mud and sand dredged from a proposed 2000 foot channel, 6 feet deep, was protested today before the joint legislative committee on harbors and public lands.

Herman A. McDonald, State Associate Commissioner of Public Works, said the project would cost $5500, and that the department, with limited money at its disposal, felt other meritorious projects should be considered first.

Those who favored the project are Rep. Edward J. Sandberg, Edward G. Morris, Edward A. Poland and Rep. William B. Thomas.

MAN ARRESTED AS HE DRESSES TO MARRY

Peter Miskinis 28, was dressing for his wedding today when police burst into the room in Marcella st., Cambridge, and arrested him on year-old robbery charge.

He ducked under the arm of the law and fled from the room but thought better of making a public appearance scantily clad, then, being no fool, and surrendered.

TO MARRY TODAY

Today he was to have married Bridget Eleanor Sullivan, 28, of Dearborn pl., Roxbury, at St. Joseph's Church, Roxbury.

Miskinis told police Miss Sullivan knew he was a fugitive but this did not unduly disturb.

"I'll never marry him after this," she said. "I wouldn't marry a thief. It is surely a Friday the 13th, for me, but I guess it was all for the best."

TAKEN TO BROCKTON

The bride-to-have-been is a former nurse. She lives with her mother, Mrs. Mary Sullivan.

"What a wedding present!" Miskinis exclaimed when police, armed with a writ of habeas corpus, called today.

He was taken back to Brockton for arraignment on the charge of robbery. He formerly lived in that city in Arthur st., and escaped from a patrol wagon following his arrest there last year.

Taken to Brockton District Court today for arraignment, the charge against Miskinis was dismissed as Plymouth County grand jury having indicted him for robbery while armed. He was taken from Brockton to Plymouth.

FIREMEN SAVE 2 DOGS IN RIVER

A German police dog and an Irish terrier struggling frantically in the icy waters of the Mystic river off Ship ave., Medford, were rescued today by firemen.

Mrs. W. P. Sawyer of Riverside ave. noticed the police dog struggling in the water and called the fire department.

Firemen John L. Mahon and Warren Vose commandeered a small boat, rowed to the dog, and pulled him in with a fire hook.

The terrier, spotted running back and forth on the shore, finally ventured on the thin ice in a reckless attempt of his own and to break through and suffer the same fate as the police dog.

A second trip in the boat brought the terrier to safety. Both dogs were given a brisk rundown and first aid treatment and allowed to go their way.

How to Escape FLU

1 Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most likely to be spread; overcrowded cars and public meeting places; stuffy, poorly ventilated rooms.

2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air but avoid drafts or chilling.

3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.

4 Above all, avoid catching colds. They lower your resistance to the flu germ. Ward them off. At the first sign of any cold, take Bayer Aspirin and remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone. Gargle with Bayer Aspirin dissolved in water at the first touch of sore throat, as this will relieve the soreness and reduce the inflammation.

5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

LONDOS MAY BEAT DUSEK BY A GRUNT

BOSTON IS THE SPORTINGEST town on this terrestrial globe. Nowhere in the wide, wide world will you find, to the square inch, so many arenas, ball parks, playgrounds, teams, competitors, or such a wide variety of sports, and whole-souled interest in them, as right here in the baked beans and brownbread belt. Therefore, with the wrestling epidemic raging and the grapplers having the populace by the throat, it is only natural Boston should be flooded with mat champions.

So far this year the Hub has seen two "world's wrestling champions" in action, Gus Sonnenberg and Ed George, who took the title from Dynamite Gus. Tonight in Boston Garden it will see another, Jim Londos.

In this neck of the woods Ed George is hailed as grappling king. Down on the New York sector of the wrestling front Jim Londos is billed as "world's champion." Take your own pick. We're neutral

RUDY DUSEK.

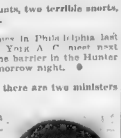
YOUR OLD FRIEND Rudy Dusek has been selected to test Londos' championship ability. Jim has tuned up for the fray by keeping busier than a bird dog in a briar patch. He wrestled in Cincinnati on Tuesday night and New York on Wednesday. Despite his bulk, Jim hops over the map like a flea.

We pick Londos to win by three agonised grunts, two terrible snorts, five awful grimaces and a heart-rending squeal.

Because of racing in the Meadowbrook games in Philadelphia last night, and being scheduled to run in the New York A. C. meet next Monday night, Ray Conger is not likely to face the barrier in the Hunter Mile at the B. A. A. games in the Arena here tomorrow night.

Washington has a basketball team on which there are two ministers and a deacon, and which is managed by a Jew.

WHY IS IT some fighters prefer to train in stuffy, crowded, smoke-laden, poorly-ventilated gymnasiums rather than in wide open spaces? Take Len Harvey, the British middleweight champion, who meets Vince Dundee in a return match in New York tonight. For the first match with Dundee the Limey conditioned himself at Gus Wilson's in Orangeburg. For tonight's fight he has trained in stuffy Stillman's gym in one on Eighth ave. just above "Murderers' Row" that short stretch on W. 52nd st. between Broadway and Eighth ave., on which a dozen boxers have died off since prohibition made it fashionable.



LEN HARVEY.

"It was too blooming lonesome out in the bloody country," explains the Englishman.

LUIS FIRPO, the Wild Bull of the Pampas, who was a soda jerker in Buenos Ayres before taking to the ring, once confided to us at beautiful Saratoga Lake.

"Country only place for bullfrogs and donkeys."

Firpo was longish, for the bright lights of Broadway and Avenido de Mayo just like Harvey was for Broadway or old Soho.

The English fighter with the weirdest training ideas was Jem Driscoll. He often did his road work at midnight. Jem always slept until noon

LESTER PATRICK.

REPORTS STILL prevail that Newsy Lalonde will be called in to manage the Maroons at the close of the present playing season, but Lester Patrick, who friends tell us is finding it difficult to get along with Col. Hammond, may jump New York and take up the Montreal managerial reins. The Silver Fox is one of the real great hockey pilots. He should be let alone. Art Ross is one of the few managers who is sitting pretty.

Rob Grove says the new ball will enable him to hang up a new strikeout record. "My fingers are shorter and the seams will enable me to get a better grip," opines Lefty.

THE SALARY LIST of the major league clubs is estimated as follows: Braves, $150,000; Red Sox, $125,000 Yankees, $300,000; Athletics, $270,000; Cleveland, $250,000, Tigers, $225,000; Senators, $200,000; White Sox, $150,000; Browns, $150,000

HARRY WRIGHT, brother of George Wright of Wright & Ditson, made one home run record Babe Ruth never will equal. Harry hit seven homers in one game But that was the days before organized ba.

The longest homer? Well, one day a Boston player hit a homer that landed in Providence—via a passing freight train. But there was a longer one than that. In a game on Staten Island a player smashed the ball onto a freighter bound for Europe.

JUDGE FUCHS thinks that Willie Sherdel's pitching will improve with the new ball. The judge denies any intention of letting Sherdel go to Brooklyn. Rumor still persists a trade is brewing.

WILLIE SHERDEL.

Jack Quinn, Howard Ehmke, Bill Doak and Ed Rommel are types of pitchers who will benefit by the new ball. Red Faber, spitballer, says the new ball will suit curve ball throwers.

JERRY CLEARY, who you all recall as a mighty good lightweight (Jerry Curley) is now clerking in a Back Bay store . . . Johnny Morris, TD champion, is B. A. A. boxing instructor and often drops around to fan with Jerry . . . Of course you know Steve Mahoney, great little feather, is sporting editor of the Record.

Wentra' Tunney and Firpo have been matched to meet in Miami and not Gene and Luis. One Jack Tunney and one Mike Firpo. Ever hear of 'em?

MANAGER BOSSIE BUSH has banned automobiles from the White Sox training camp. He says they make more trouble than ball players' wives.

Dr. M. B. Sherzer is paid about $3000 yearly to look after the teeth of Ranger and American hockey players. Says Roy Worters and Murray Murdoch were the coolest under drill and forceps.

DR. SCHERZER once pulled a tooth for Jim Maloney. The next night Shamus was knocked out by Jack Sharkey. What's the moral?

Judge Landis to Stay on Job

CZAR DENIES RESIGNATION RUMORS

Bellevair, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP)—Rumors that he is considering resigning as commissioner of baseball because of his health and disgust with several phases of the game were branded as erroneous today by Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

"This report comes out about every six months," he said, "and I have not yet commenced to deny anything."

Landis Reported to Be Disgusted With Job

New York, Feb. 13 (CSO)—Rumors that Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball is seriously considering retirement from his office were heard today.

Disgust with certain conditions which he has met while administering the duties of his office was given as his chief reason for retiring, with ill health and the suit of the St. Louis Browns as the contributory causes.

The suit which Phil Ball of the Browns has directed against Landis, in reality was against organized baseball and its right to impose regulations on its members, Landis, as the official who enforced a ruling in accordance with an agreement which one of Ball's agents signed, was made the defendant.

He has refused to go into court during the hearing of the case leaving the entire matter with his attorney.

One report has it that Landis is awaiting the verdict before making known his desire to step out. Whether the verdict goes against him or for him it is said to make no difference.

Some baseball men condemn the American League for not taking some public action when Ball brought suit which Landis operated when he ruled that Fred Bennett should be retained as a member of the Browns or sent to some club outside the St. Louis American League club chain.

But the owners have remained mum while Ball carried the suit into the courts.

BANG! WHAM! AND BOTH HIT FLOOR!

ERNIE MAUER — REFEREE HENNESSEY — MIKE BRUSIN

DOUBLE KNOCKOUTS are a ring rarity. One happened in Detroit the other night, when Ernie Mauer, left, and Mike Brusin, right, both connected with rights. Ernie hit Mike and Mike hit Ernie and both hit the floor. Wham! Referee Hennessey scratched his head and then started to count over the both of them. They were up at "nine" and fighting.

ADAMS WANTS TO BUILD OLYMPIC CHAMPIONSHIP SEXTET IN BOSTON

By BILL GRIMES

After a thorough investigation of the amateur hockey conditions, President C. F. Adams and Manager Art Ross of the Bruins have stepped into the breach and are arranging for the organization of a four-club league.

As the Olympic championship will be held at Lake Placid next winter, the Adams-Ross advent into the amateur circles is most opportune. It will be the first time in the annals of Olympic hockey competition that responsible parties have had a voice in the selection of the club which is to represent the United States.

Although the amateurs have made a valiant fight to stave a comeback, they have been hindered at every turn, and always by underground methods.

Ross Confident U. C. Six Can Be Made Perfect

Adams and Ross are primarily interested in the University Club. Adams is arranging for four practice sessions a week at the Garden for the U. C., and Ross has volunteered to coach the team. Ross has sat in on a few University Club practice sessions, and is confident that the players can be welded into one of the strongest amateur teams in the world.

Since the University Club players learned that Adams and Ross were interested in their welfare, they have developed a new spirit, with the result that they went out and gave Harvard its initial beating of the season this week

C. F. Adams should be a powerful factor in the selection of the United States Olympic hockey club regardless of the fact that he has no connections with the committee. He is the father of professional hockey in the States and recognized as the outstanding power in the game

One thing is certain, that backed by C. F. Adams, the University Club will receive a square deal when the Olympic committee selects the United States representative. Adams is thoroughly versed on the methods of the "bag men" who were responsible for the selection of the 1920 and 1924 U. S. Olympic teams.

Adams to Advocate Selection of a Team, Not Individuals

He has no axe to grind, nor is he seeking or accepting favors. As Adams is, to put it mildly, quite outspoken, the powers will not talk as fluently and picturesquely in his presence as they have in the past.

Adams will, in all probability, advocate the selection of a team and not individual players as was the custom in 1920 and 1924. For the Olympic championships at Antwerp and Chamonix, the United States selected players from Boston, Pittsburgh and St. Paul. And from the start to the end of both trips, there was trouble

In the first place, very few of the players were bona fide amateurs. In fact during the journey to Antwerp, the players held a meeting and demanded more expense money. Another instance of the loose methods that prevailed was the statement made by Taffy Abel, now a Chicago Blackhawk, to the effect that he lost considerable money by making the trip as his salary in St. Paul ceased when he joined the U. S. Olympic team

All U. C. Players Are Amateurs and Americans

Without exception, the University Club players are amateurs in every sense of the word. They are all American born. Potentially, they are a strong aggregation, boasting of many ex-college stars. Their success has been hampered by incompetent handling and cliques

HARVARD LOSES POLO STAR

Handicapped by the loss of Edward Jenkins, the Harvard polo team left for West Point to meet Army tomorrow.

Harvard and Army have been undefeated so far. The loss of Jenkins has the Crimson worried, however. Jenkins was rated by far the most skillful player on the Harvard trio.

The Crimson lineup will be Cornelius Bliss, No. 1; Elbridge Gerry, No. 2, and Harry Nicholas, No. 3. For Army, Gordan Cusack is No. 1, Larry Rogers, No. 2, and Royden Beebe, No. 3.

Kentville Wildcats to Play Clubmen

Nova Scotia hockey followers are in for a treat later on this month when the Kentville Wildcats will troup down to the Arena for a two-game series with the University Club sextet, winners over Harvard.

The first game will be played on February 25 and the second game on February 27. Last year when the Wildcats hit the Boston ice, there was plenty of interest and excitement.

If You Don't Know

A total of 200 new players will go South with the 16 major league clubs this season . . . These rookies average 23.7 years in age . . . Bowling was introduced to American by the Dutch about 300 years ago . . . Football became so popular in England 800 years ago that the king placed a ban on the game, charging that it was interfering with the national and compulsory sport of archery . . . George Earnshaw of A's and Babe Phelps of the Dodgers have been taking the baths at Hot Springs for the past month to get in shape for the coming baseball season . . . Hockey pucks behave better, the longer they are in use and the players don't like the idea of fans keeping discs that are knocked off the playing surface . . . George Beatles, pro at the Highland Golf Club at Attleboro is one of the very few southpaw links instructors in the world . . . Pro football teams are hot on the trail of John Karcis and Latham Flannagan, who closed brilliant grid careers at Carnegie Tech last fall . . . Mike Brady twice tied for first place in the National open golf championships and lost in each play-off . . .

B.A.A. MEETS ON TOMORROW

By BILL CONNELL

Track and field sports have their most important day of the Boston indoor season tomorrow, with both the B. A. A. school games and the N. E. A. A. U. title events in the afternoon and the annual B. A. A. meeting in the evening scheduled for the Arena.

The force of carpenters who take care of the Arena track will have the oval in the best possible condition before the opening event of the school games tomorrow afternoon. Last year one of the corners of the Arena track was defective and there were several bad spills.

In the school meeting Worcester Academy is one of the favored groups. The Worcester team is well balanced. The academy band will provide music during the afternoon and evening.

The entry list for the school games is one of the largest ever made up for B. A. A. games.

French Runner in Special 1000

The club games in the evening should be great. Most of the stars of the season are entered and Paul Keller, 880-meter run champion of France, will race in the special 1000.

George Bullwinkle of the City College of New York, Pinkey Schor of the Millrose A. A. and Charley Thompson of New York can make the pace hot for the French racer in this 1000-yard run.

A bunch of great relay races, including mile, Harvard-Yale and Boston College-Holy Cross races, and the Andover-Exeter struggle are on the club meet program The Hunter mile, with Leo Lermond running, is one of the outstanding events of the night.

Watch Final Edition for Racing Alphabet, showing what tracks and in what races all horses start tomorrow.

SHIFT MADE IN POLO CARD

The 51st Field Artillery polo team will replace the veteran 101st Field Artillery aggregation in the feature indoor polo match tomorrow night at the Commonwealth Armory according to announcement by Lieut.-Col. Charles Furber of the 101st.

Owing to the absence of Forrester "Tim" Clark, six-goal leader of Battery A, in New York on business, and the sailing of Lieut. Theodore Pitman, 101st back, for Bermuda today, the regular scheduled league team between the two rival national guard rivals will be postponed until a later date.

The 51st outfit will present a strong lineup with the same players who represented Boston at Cleveland last winter. Brig.-Gen. Dan Needham of the 101st Artillery will be at No. 1; Lieut.-Col. Roger Eckfeldt of last year's Battery A championship Class B league will ride at No. 2, and Capt. Harvey Moore, at back.

Bike Club Dinner Set for Feb. 21

All aboard for the 53d anniversary of the first annual dinner of the Boston Bicycle Club. It will be held in the Boston Art Club on Feb 21, Dr. Walter G. Kendall, Josiah R. Hathaway, Edmund H. Norris, Malcolm L. Bridgman and Thomas Leavitt are planning big doings for the old boys

H. C. WANTS TO PLAY AT HOME

As far as Holy Cross is concerned, the Nov. 28 date for the annual Boston College-Holy Cross football game will not be given up because of the conflicting Stanford-Dartmouth contest at Harvard stadium.

Cleo O'Donnell, director of athletics at the Worcester college, however, would like to see the game played at Fitton field, a move he has suggested in other years. This year, however, he believes the game might be played there.

O'Donnell has maintained that despite the larger attendance in Boston, the Eagle-Crusader game should be played in Worcester once every few years. Facing the competition of the Stanford-Dartmouth event, he believes it would be a wise move. As for changing the date from the Saturday after Thanksgiving to Thanksgiving, that he definitely opposes.

Holy Cross will hold spring football practice, as usual, giving for the reason the same as that at Harvard

"Eastern Boys Can't Take It," Says Knute Rockne

Phoenix, Ari., Feb. 13—Knute Rockne calls sports over-emphasis "Bosh." "Except in the far East there has been no cry raised. The main trouble with these eastern boys is they can't take it.

"It's only in the over-populated areas along the Atlantic seaboard where the boys like to go out the night before the game and tear down the town that there has been any cry of 'over emphasis.' You don't hear anybody in the South, Middle West or West raising the question, do you?"

"These eastern boys just can't take it. Blocking is what wins or loses football contests and they can't stand the punishment it administers. Either they haven't the hardihood or else they don't keep in condition so imperative to a successful gridiron team."

Hack Wilson Limited to 8 Uniforms for Season

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP)—Poor Hack Wilson! The major league home run champion recently signed a fat contract with the Cubs, and now the club has retaliated by limiting him to eight uniforms for the 1931 season.

Wilson has a propensity for getting his suits dirty in a hurry, so the management decided to buy him four uniforms for home use and four for the road.

The rest of the Cubs also will be pretty well outfitted. Each will have two home uniforms and two for the road, and all four sets will be of different pattern. To cope with changes in weather, two lightweight sweatshirts have been purchased for the athletes.

Dick Daviscourt, California vs. Nick Veleoff, Bulgaria.
Tom Marvin, Cherokee Indian vs. Firpo Wilcox, Oklahoma.

By JACK CONWAY

Jim Londos, with the socially prominent Edward Stokesbury Hutchinson of Philadelphia as one of his press agents, will make his bow at the Boston Garden tonight when he will oppose Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark., in a one-fall finish match.

Ray Fabiani, Garden matchmaker who makes his home in Philadelphia, has given the youthful Hutchinson the title as assistant matchmaker. Fabiani, a keen showman, has been ballyhooing Hutchinson as one of his press agents for the past month.

Jack Conway

Hutchinson arrived in town at about the same time Londos did. He immediately hurried to the Garden where he gave a mere deep insight to the dear old wrestling game.

Fabiani intends to use Hutchinson to help ballyhoo his wrestling promotions in Philadelphia and Boston. Ray believes that the youngster can be used to good advantage to help increase the gate receipts.

Hutchinson's father is rated as having so many millions that it requires an adding machine to count them. Young Hutchinson was at one time a student at St. Paul's school in Concord, but has gone in for wrestling rather than scholastic honors.

Fabiani, a good show man, can see where a young man with his name in the social register can gain publicity for his various grappling ventures.

Londos is Favorite to Win Tonight

I have not got young Hutchinson's opinion on the matter, but I am picking Londos to win over Dusek tonight. I have not heard of any betting on the contest as most of the boys like the chances of the Greek.

Londos has been winning quite regularly in New York and Philadelphia rings, and looks as though he possesses too much class for the rugged Dusek. The latter has won four straight matches in local rings, but this has been due more to the fact he has not had any serious opposition than because he is one of the world's foremost grapplers.

Londos, on the other hand, is a first class grappler. He can defend the ordinary run of wrestlers without much trouble.

I do not believe that the energetic young Mister Hutchinson will have to apologize for what Londos does tonight. He will wrap Dusek up in due time.

Garibaldi and Steinbach in the Semifinal

Gino Garibaldi, Italian heavyweight, and Milo Steinbach of Belgium will collide in the semifinal. It will be a 45-minute match to a decision.

Garibaldi has won three straight matches here, and is picked to win from Steinbach.

Tiny Roebuck is favored to win from Andy Zaharoff of St. Louis in another match.

The other 30-minute matches will feature Dick Daviscourt of California against Nick Voleoff of Bulgaria, and Tom Marvin, Cherokee Indian, against Firpo Wilcox.

Two judges and a referee, the same as at boxing shows, will have charge of the verdicts.

WYKOFF HURT LOSING BOUT TO LUTZE

By RINGSIDE

Nick Lutze of California won the right to battle Don George for the heavyweight wrestling championship when he defeated Lee Wykoff, former University of St. Louis star, in 36m. 22s. at a show staged by Paul Bowser at the Arena.

Bowser announced that he would stage the finals between George and Lutze at the Arena on next Thursday night.

Lutze conquered Wykoff with a double arm hold and back slam. Wykoff received a concussion when tossed on his head. It was necessary to assist him from the ring. He became unconscious when he reached his dressing room.

Wykoff was unable to come out after the first fall, and Referee Sam Smith declared Lutze the winner.

It was an hour before Wykoff was in a fit condition to be removed to his hotel. He was treated by Dr. John Connor while in his dressing room.

"Wykoff suffered a severe head concussion," said Dr. Connor. "He was also badly injured on his chest."

The match was one of the hardest ever staged here. Wykoff used a flying tackle as his chief offensive weapon. Lee at times managed the rules of wrestling and took healthy punches at his opponent.

Wrestlers Crash Through Ropes Several Times

It is seldom that two wrestlers have been as well matched physically. Each possessed youth, and a burning desire to win their way to a wrestling with George, the champion.

During several wild mixups, both wrestlers went crashing through the ropes into the crowd.

Prior to Lutze scoring with the only fall of the match, Wykoff had made a fine spurt. He had dropped Lutze three times with head holds. Then Nick suddenly clamped on a double arm lock and sent Wykoff crashing to the mat with a reverse arm. Wykoff's head hit the canvas with a terrific thud. He was completely dazed. It was necessary to assist him to his corner and later carry him out of the ring to his dressing room.

Joe Stecher Wins From John Vassel'l

Joe Stecher, former world's heavyweight champion, looked like his best when he met seven fine men in several years when he tossed George Vassell, Greek 30-way-style, in 27 minutes 22 seconds. Stecher gained the victory with his famous body scissors.

Stecher forced the issue at all times. He roughed Vassell around at every opportunity and gave the fans plenty of action.

Count Zarynoff and Oscar Sigerson of Sweden went 15 minutes to a draw in a contest that was lively all the way.

Bibber McCoy Victor Over Rex Smith

Bob "Bibber" McCoy of Cambridge won from Rex Smith of Michigan in 12m. 53s.

Smith used ice gruyere gained the victory.

Otto Huthanen of Finland and John Brandowitch went 15 minutes to a draw.

"Kewpie" Kilroy tossed Charles Piatkus, Lynn, in four minutes 21 seconds with ah inside crotch, lift and slam.

DAMON RUNYON Says

(Copyright, 1931, Universal Service, Inc.)

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13—William Lawrence Stribling, Jr., sometimes known as Young Stribling, stepped briskly into Ye Coffee Shop in the Hotel McAllister, where your faithful old operative was inhaling Java.

William Lawrence Stribling, Jr., was minus a hat, proving that there is something in heredity after all. His celebrated parent, William Lawrence Stribling, Sr., hasn't worn a hat since he lost his only sconce piece during the big blow in Florida in 1926. It was a five dollar hat, at that.

Damon Runyon

The first act by William Lawrence Stribling, Jr., on entering Ye Coffee Shop was to strike operative a stout clout on the back with the flat of his hand, causing your operative to inadvertently swallow an entire cup of coffee at one gulp and also the spoon.

Without waiting for your operative to recover from his choking, William Lawrence Stribling, Jr., seized one of your operative's dukes and proceeded to squeeze it, slightly maiming the second and third fingers to such an extent that these four lines are being pecked out of a typewriter with the index finger of the right hand.

"Pernaps not as important a department," said the Princeton athletic head, "but quite as definite. As such they figure very prominently in the life of every undergraduate and must be so considered."

"Giving the game back to the boys necessitates a great deal of clarifying," said Kennedy, adding that "the person who believes that college graduates have the time and inclination to conduct the business end of college athletics knows nothing of all about the task."

Young Stribling Says He Feels "Grand"

There was in William Lawrence Stribling, Jr.'s, mayhem the outward semblance of friendliness, but mature reflection convinces your operative that the King of the Cane Brakes really meant to playfully cripple him for life, possibly on the score of old asparagusses past herein.

But what are you going to do when a man hello-hellos you with apparent warmth of tone, even though the salutation is accompanied with fiendish gesture?

"I am not good," your operative remarked. "How do you look?"

The intended irony was lost on the would-be contender for the world's heavyweight title. He grinned amiably, and sat down.

"I don't know how I look, but I feel grand," he said. "I just landed here in my good ship, King of the Cane Brakes, from Oklahoma, the new baronial seat of the Stribling. I brought both by children, their governess, and my wife with me, and I'm going to stay here and help pa with his Walker-Bibbo fight."

Stribling Sure He Will Beat Schmeling

"What do you think about your fight with Schmeling," your operative inquired.

"Why, I think I'll win," replied Stribling, brightly. "I don't expect an easy fight, but I believe I'll flatten that German, sure. I'll get him inside of ten rounds, so the referee of whether it is to be 10 or 15 heats doesn't bother me.

"I've got a pretty fair idea of his style, and I think he's too slow to cause me any trouble. This time next year I'll be heavyweight champion of the world which Runyon, so she's as you're alive."

Then William Lawrence Stribling, Jr., departed to find a suitable patsy against whom he can work real though the crowds.

DIAMOND TILT PLANNED FOR THIS YEAR

New York, Feb. 13 (INS)—Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the Princeton graduate athletic committee, today said he had no comment to make on the meeting he had with William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, late last night.

It was reported that Kennedy and Jim Conant, also director of athletics at Harvard, agreed on a meeting of the two colleges on baseball team in spring.

Kennedy said football and baseball are as definitely a part of of collegiate endeavor as any other sport, if not more so.

SERA MARTIN BEATS BLAKE

Philadelphia Feb 13 (US)—Seraphin Martin of France, world 800 meters record holder, won his first race on American soil when he breasted the tape in the Meadowbrook 600 one of the feature events of the 16th annual Meadowbrook Club meet at the Arena here.

Martin, amid the cheers of 7000 track fans, outran a field that included Ed Blake, Boston A. A.; C. A. Bloodgood of Millrose.

Stella Walsh, world's fastest girl sprinter, equalled her own world time of 5 4-5 seconds in winning the 40 yards dash.

SHARKEY HOPS OFF FOR WEST

Jack Sharkey, American heavyweight champion, left for California today. He had all his training outfit with him and said he intended to keep in condition while on the coast.

Sharkey intends to start an active ring campaign the latter part of March.

The reason for Sharkey's trip West is to assist Ernie Schaf, who is boxing Dick Daniel in a 10-round bout at Minneapolis on next Monday night, and Dynamite Jackson in Los Angeles on Feb. 24.

Sharkey will act as Schaaf's chief second in both of these contests.

Sharkey was accompanied by Mrs. Sharkey, Johnny Buckley, his manager, and Mrs. Buckley, Schaaf and Al Lacy, trainer.

Bill Heeverean, Jim Shaunnessey, Jerry Buckley, Spider Murphy, Henry Kaufman and a large collection of fans were at South Station to give Sharkey and his party a send-off when they left for Chicago on a noon train.

Sharkey will return to Boston early in March. He will then be signed for a series of bouts. It is likely he will be pitted against Tuffy Griffiths in Chicago, Mickey Walker in either New York or Detroit and against Tommy Loughran in Philadelphia.

Sharkey has given up hope of meeting Max Schmeling. He feels the German knows he can lick him and so won't enter the ring with him.

Passing the Puck

Although Dartmouth has not meet with its usual success in hockey this season, while Harvard has only one black mark against it, the Green-Crimson title at the Boston Garden tomorrow night, will be a rugged battle.

Charlie Cunningham, Sam Batchelder and Johnny Putnam.

Dartmouth has a heavy checking defense in Hal Andres and Hans Johnson, and there will be splendid goalore when these Green football stars start dropping opponents.

According to Ag Smith, the referee, Andres dropped Don McLennon of Yale, with the most deadly but legitimate, body check he ever saw, and Ag has seen and given plenty. McLennan shook for a minute after he had collided with Dartmouth's last fall's football captain.

In order that Andres and Johnson become proficient in the body checking department, Coach Brainy Ross Power has had them on the defense minus their sticks. They both hit hard but fair and Harvard will be in for some rugged stops when they attempt to go through this pair of Newton boys.

Bill Morton is going along fast as a hockey player. Bill is one of that type of athlete who delights in bodily contact. He is very fast and since he has been used on the front line, is far more effective.

The Johnny Garrison-Bill Morton battles promises to be one of the features of the Harvard-Dartmouth game. Garrison has not a peer as a college center but at times he loses his effectiveness by a display of tempersament.

Although Bob Taylor scored the winning goal, Benny Grant was the all important factor in the Tigers' victory over the Rhode Island Reds. Grant is held in the highest esteem by the Tiger fans and has been a life saver for Eddie Powers.

Ag Smith and Bill Stewart will officiate at the Harvard-Dartmouth game.

With Capt. Frank Luce back in the lineup, Yale is going to be a hard nut for any club to beat. Luce was injured in the Boston Hockey Club-Yale game and was out for almost two months. He is an exceptionally smart center and will give Harvard plenty of trouble.

In spite of the fact that they are playing their first season of center zone forward passing, the amateurs have developed some very clever passes in that territory.

It did not take Art Ross long to get the University Club into the games won column. The "Grads" have been floundering around for years without any place in particular but now that they have taken Harvard's measure, they are going to be a tough aggregation to halt.

The Maroon-Canadien cattle in the Forum next Tuesday night promises to be a hectic affair. The Flying Frenchmen have defeated the Maroons three times and beat Ted one. Undoubtedly, the Sylvio Mantha-George Boucher feud will be the usual number of fights in the Millionaire section.

In Harry Oliver and Hal Darragh, the Bruins have two of the cleanest hockey players in professional hockey. They always mind their own business and seldom draw penalties, but they are mad news if they believe an opponent is deliberately trying to injure them.

BRUINS RECALL LYONS TO TEAM

Manager Art Ross of the Bruins announced that he had recalled Ronald Peaches Lyons, forward, from the Philadelphia Quakers team of the National League and that Lyons would play with the Bruins tomorrow night against the Montreal Maroons.

Lyons had been sent to the Philadelphia team by the Bruins on recall option. The last date for recalling Lyons is February 15 so that Manager Ross had to exercise his rights to the player.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

Assuming for demonstrative purposes that your back swing is smooth, rythmic and correctly paced, your forward swing should begin by starting your arms, which of course, means your hands, directly toward the ground. This at first may appear to be an awkward motion, but if you so control your right hand and arm in the back swing that the right palm faced upward, at the top, you will find you have more shoulder twist to the right and that your recoiling action will be more smooth and natural so that your arms do start toward the ground more easily played jealousy and had made threats.

A CHILD BATTLES TO ESCAPE THE CHAIR OF DEATH

Then on the day of Glover's funeral, three days after the murder, the missing girl was found hiding under a bed in the Glover house. Taken to Waltham police headquarters she made a statement under what her lawyer later characterized as a "piece of outrageous third degree work."

In this statement Hattie revealed that Glover had gone to the laundry to keep a love tryst with her, and had met death there.

RUSTLE OF DRESS

According to the girl Glover had made an appointment with her for the morning, and had mistreated her in the laundry. Hattie said she cried and her employer had threatened to kill her if she told anyone what happened.

She said that Glover told her to go out ahead of him and that, as she went down stairs, he began to whistle. Hattie denied ever having left the room or of having had a talk with a resident in her house. She admitted she had threatened to kill herself because of Glover's treatment of her and that she had previously revealed the situation to Mrs. Glover.

A significant feature of the statement which paved the way for use in the trial was the declaration that both Hattie and Glover heard a noise in the laundry like the rustling of a dress.

The girl said she did not investigate, but left the laundry by means of a window, hurried home and hid under the bed. She denied that anyone had told her to shoot Glover.

For more than a year thereafter Hattie remained in East Cambridge jail, a contented, industrious prisoner. The following October a grand jury had indicted her for murder, and in December of 1910 her trial began.

AIDED BY JUDGE

John J. Higgins of the law firm of Middlesex County pitted the state and Hattie was defended by Melvin M. Johnson and A. Hovey Kennedy, assigned by the court. Judge Bond, since dead, presided.

The public sympathy was largely with the little defendant and this sympathy was shared by the presiding judge, whose rulings aroused the ire of the prosecuting attorney and left him helpless.

Glover's dying declaration involving Hattie was ruled out, as was an alleged confession made by the girl while in jail. The trial lasted more than two weeks with crowded courtrooms each session. Hattie's father came down from West Acton to attend. Her two sisters Irene and Lillian, were also present daily. Irene, in the meantime having married. But Hattie's greatest comfort was Pete Robertaille who had hurried to her aid.

ONLY OUT AN HOUR

There was also a swarm of newspaper people present, reporters, special writers and feature writers to say nothing of sob sisters. Certain of the reporters had done extensive work prior to the trial in order to dig up information of some of which was of great value to the defense.

The prosecution attempted to prove by circumstantial evidence that Hattie had planned to do herself because of Glover's treatment of her and that she had previously revealed the situation to Mrs. Glover.

A significant feature of the statement which paved the way for use in the trial was the declaration that both Hattie and Glover heard a noise in the laundry like the rustling of a dress.

The girl said she did not investigate, but left the laundry by means of a window, hurried home and hid under the bed. She denied that anyone had told her to shoot Glover.

For more than a year thereafter Hattie remained in East Cambridge jail, a contented, industrious prisoner. The following October a grand jury had indicted her for murder, and in December of 1910 her trial began.

STILL A MYSTERY

Eventually came the final arguments, followed by a long charge to the jury by Judge Bond which made a strong impression on them. After deliberating only a little more than an hour, the jury returned with a verdict of not guilty, which was received with tumultuous acclaim by the spectators in the court room.

It was later stated that the case against Hattie would have been dismissed in any event, but the verdict of the jury made this unnecessary.

Hattie returned to West Acton and married Frank Linden [illegible] N. S. who had been in Boston and who fell in love with her during her trial. According to the latest reports the couple have had several children and their married life in Nova Scotia is very happy.

In the meantime the slaying of Clarence Glover has become one of the [illegible] unsolved murder mysteries of all the courts in existence. No one else was ever charged with the crime.

HOOVER MISLED, SAYS SCHALL

Washington, Feb. 13 (INS)—Attorney General Mitchell was accused of "grossly misleading" President Hoover in his refusal to endorse Ernest Michel for appointment as a federal judge in Minnesota, in letters sent the White House today by Senator Schall (R.) of that State.

The President had before him today a protest against his attitude on Michel, signed by Lieut.-Gov. Henry Arens of Minnesota and a majority of the members of the State Senate, and another letter from Schall which said:

"I feel that it is a great misfortune that you have not been given a true picture of the Minnesota situation. I hope you may have it before you act in the matter."

The plaintiffs seek to set aside as illegal the sale or exchange of the certificates in the United Investment Assurance Trust Corp.

SCORES FELLED BY GAS FUMES

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 13 (AP)—With 48 firemen, including three battalion chiefs, in hospitals, and nearly that many more recovering from smoke and gas poisoning after being treated on the street, a downtown fire was extinguished today following a five-hour battle.

Smoke and carbon monoxide gas issuing from the basement of a blazing retail building on the Main st. bridge dropped firemen by the scores and taxed the city's first aid facilities and nearby hospitals to the utmost.

Even those with gas masks were overcome almost as rapidly as those without them. More than a hundred firemen were affected.

More than 150 gallons of blazing oil was held responsible for the gas which felled the firefighters. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

Autoist Gets Jail Sentence; Appeals

Found guilty of automobile law violations, George B. Malone, of Chestnut Hill ave., Brighton is Municipal Court today was sentenced to jail, after being branded as "untruthful" by Judge Francis J. Goode. Malone was given three months for operating an uninsured automobile, and a second jail term of five days for operating a car after his license had been revoked. He appealed.

Douglas Welcomed Home From Rutland

Congressman John J. Douglas was welcomed back to his East Boston home today after being confined to a sanitarium in Rutland for more than six months with tuberculosis. He was pronounced in good condition.

He will be present tomorrow night at a banquet in East Boston high school, where the victory gained in keeping an oil plant from locating there will be celebrated.

Store Owner Held in North End Shooting

Olympic Christoforo of North sq. was held in bonds of $2000 by Judge Delano Putnam, in Municipal Court today, after he pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault with intent to kill Peter Mollili of Fleet st., North End. He will be tried Feb. 17.

Mollili is in Haymarket Relief Hospital with a bullet wound in the back. The shooting, police say, followed an argument that started when Mollili fell through a window in Christoforo's store.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

doctor into this very place!" exclaimed the Police Commissioner.

"One did. She just wanted to be near him—she admitted it."

Lock of Hair

Who could this woman have been? The same mysterious creature the doctor had found in his office door? The one who had telephoned him through Mrs. Westwick and summoned him to the house on Peabody Road?

"What excuse did she have for coming into your shop—was she here for a manicure?" asked Coit.

"Yes, but that was a bluff—she liked the doctor."

"Pretty girl?" asked the Commissioner carelessly.

"Not so young—very pretty—not so bad," chortled the voluble barber. "Blonde hair, nice shape, sweet voice. Just a married woman—I saw the ring—just a married woman with a yearning, devouring, searing—ah! awful, terrific passion for a strong, good-looking man. She said she did not even know his name. But she confessed her feeling to me."

"Yes—I gave her a lock of his hair, after he went out."

The Commissioner laughed. No one could have guessed from his easy attitude, that now the hunter had sniffed a scent. He lit a cigarett to hide my own deep excitem nt.

The barber shook his head.

"No, she never came back. Why? You are not that lady's husband?"

He drew back. With the natural dramatic instinct of his race, he was ready to make a tragedy out of any conversation he got into.

"No," said Thatcher Coit, "But I am a friend of Doc or Maskell I am one of the few men in the city today who believes him innocent."

"Si, signor."

"The lady wore a wedding ring. What did it look like?"

The barber's liquid eyes turned upward in turmoil.

"The ring," he said at last, "was of platinum—set with diamonds—and two big pearls."

"Thanks."

The barber shrugged his shoulders.

"Shampoo? Massage?"

No Real Grudge

Thatcher Coit, who remained silent while the final touches were given his face and hair, had one question held in reserve. He put it casually, as he rose from the chair.

"Would you know that woman if you saw her again?" he asked.

The barber looked at the Commissioner's face and for the first time really recognized him.

"Mother of God!" he whispered. "The Commissioner!"

"I told you identify that woman, Marinelli—"

"Yes—yes."

"And I can keep your mouth shut—"

"Ah—I am a man of few words, Mr. Commissioner!"

We emerged into the darkness of the street.

"Now," said Thatcher Coit, a few minutes later, when we were again in the car and driving uptown, "it is becoming more and more apparent that the killer had no real grudge against Geraldine Foster. That poor girl was merely a pawn to be sacrificed in a larger game, in which millions were involved. All the evidence points flatly against the doctor as leading to that conclusion. Imagine collecting the doctor's hair clippings, just to plant the evidence under the dead girl's finger nails."

We came to a halt in front of a walk-up apartment on upper Boylston, and far from the scene of his crime. Thatcher Coit rapidly mounted four flights of steps and rapped on the door. A woman in [illegible] gown pulled back the door and [illegible] with a baby, kicking at her left heel opened the door and [illegible] with displeasure.

"You remember me?"

"Sure."

Turning to his mother, he pleaded:

"Aw, let him come in, mom. They're cops, but they don't care nothing about the apple jack in our kitchen. They're just Tammany Hall gang."

We did our best to keep a straight face, as Mrs. Planzen said:

"Any reward that would go to my child comes to his mother what needs it to keep soul and body together—and not to his father who drinks up every cent that he lays his hands on."

"Exactly," agreed Thatcher Coit, and presently we were admitted into the shabby living room.

"Now Warren," he said, "before I went inside the house that other day, you told me a wild story about a ghost without any clothes in the murder house?"

"Yes, sir."

"What made you say that?"

"I saw it."

"You saw the naked ghost?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where?"

"Inside the house."

"Where were you?"

"I was inside the house, too."

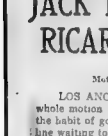
'WHITE SHOULDERS' SELECTED AS FOLLOW-UP PICTURE TO 'CIMARRON'

JACK HOLT, MARY ASTOR, RICARDO CORTEZ IN CAST

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor for Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 13—"Cimarron" does much for the whole motion picture industry. It gets people back again into the habit of going to the theaters. They have been standing in line waiting to see it. William Le Baron is going to try to do a repeat but first he has had to find a story. He has selected "White Shoulders" for a "Cimarron" follow-up with Mel Brown directing.

I Mel Brown who was slated to direct "Waiting at the Church," has been taken off that and put to work on "White Shoulders." Remember "White Shoulders" was to have starred Lois Wilson and Jack Holt. Then Jack Holt was hard to get just the right type for the leading man. Now he is well again and he will be the featured player, Pretty Mary Astor whose health is better than it has been for a long time will be reunited with Ricardo Cortez in one of the leading roles. Gene Raymond, Ricardo Cortez his come to the front with his last few pictures.



Louella O. Parsons

TIME SOME of the producers were getting some sense. Every time you go into the theaters and Zasu Pitts comes into the scene the whole house roars. Just one look at her and they laugh expectantly. Hal Roach is taking advantage of her popularity and signing her on a three-year contract at a very good salary. She will make six-reel pictures. Personally, I think Zasu is one of the greatest comedy arts in pictures today. She ought to be as valuable as Hardy and Laurel and Polly Moran.

ONE OF THE pleasant pieces of news in Hollywood at the moment is the return of Doris Kenyon to movies. As soon as she finishes "Cheri and I" she will play opposite Walter Huston in "Upper Underworld." I thought I had never seen Doris look as beautiful as I did when I saw her on the First National lot. The lines in her face and the stricken look in her eyes at the time of Milton Sills' death are gone. Doris has become more philosophical and sad as it is suffering always helps any actress do better work, and those of us who know Doris realize what sorrow there was in the death of her beloved Milton.

Doris Kenyon

GIVEN THE RIGHT vehicles there is every reason to believe that Robert Montgomery will be one of the biggest bets in pictures. He has the personality, the looks and he certainly knows what it's all about on the screen. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have given him excellent parts without any thought of playing him up. Now apparently he is to be played up for he is to be the featured player in "The Man in Possession." In fact, I am told that it was bought for him. The play by H. M. Harwood was produced originally in London and later in New York and it is said to have pictorial value.

JOAN BENNETT, who was first brought to Hollywood to play in a Ronald Colman picture by Samuel Goldwyn, is slated to play the lead in "Street Scene." Nod Cantle contract has not been signed but Miss Bennett has been approached on the subject and she has announced herself as delighted to have the chance to bring to the screen one of the most delectable roles of the year. Howard Hawks, I also hear it rumored will direct, as it looks as if the moment Sam Goldwyn gets back from the big town, "Street Scene" will be under way.

Joan Bennett

Joan will first play the feminine lead in "I surrender" for the Fox company. She does very nice piece of work in "Doctors' Wives." I saw a preview at River side, and it is easy to understand why the Fox company is eager to have her do another picture for them.

It is rumored that Richard Bennett and his daughter, Joan, will both be in "I Surrender." Well, they were both together on the stage in "Jarnegan," but let's not talk about "Jarnegan."

I WISH THEY'D HURRY and get Dorothy Lee. I have been hearing about her being starred for weeks and months. Every time a story comes out about her she is going to be starred in her next picture. Now comes the word that after "Room and Board" she will be in "Too Many Cooks" opposite Bert Wheeler, and then, my children, she will be ready for stardom. There is a little catch in this, however she will be ready for stardom if she makes good. Why mention stardom at all? Radio should take a leaf out of Wallace Beery's book. Wallace wouldn't be a star if they handed him a contract on a platter.

I DON'T KNOW of any two people who deserve a holiday more than Irving Thalberg and Norma Shearer. Irving spends about 23 hours a day on his job and when Norma is making a picture she is equally busy. But the two of them have decided they are going to take a trip to Europe as soon as Norma finishes her next, "A Free Soul." I imagine that both Norma's mother and Irving's mother will ask to be allowed to take care of the baby. For that matter I know a few other people who would like to make the same offer. That young gentleman is a fascinating person from all I hear.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: CLARENCE BROWN buying himself a new airplane. AILEEN PRINGLE entertaining at her home in Santa Monica in honor of out of town guests. NORMA TALMADGE back in town lunching at the Brown Derby. MARY PICKFORD looking extremely chic, getting ready for touring chores when she is called on Hollywood boulevard. LEONE NUGENT and EDDIE LOWE NUGENT (who are soon enjoying Abe Lyman's music at the Blossom Room. The MARQUIS DE LA FALAISE proving himself broadminded by casting German food at Stark's. TERRY RAMAYA, author of "A Million and One Nights," appointed managing editor of the new daily Herald by Randolph QUIGLEY. HAROLD B. FRANKLIN busier than a cranberry merchant with all his theaters, entertaining a party of Hearst guests at the Roosevelt. ANITA LOOS reported in Hollywood but where is she? CECILIA LOFTUS, gracious woman, coaching all the young stars on the Fox lot. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

On February 16, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, will give the fourth concert of the Monday evening series in Symphony Hall. The soloist will be Mieczyslaw Munz.

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"STOLEN HEAVEN" now showing at the Metropolitan proves to be a fair picture, injected into the shapeless mess of Nancy Carroll in Miss Carroll turns crank by by an accident after the first of crank and by becoming the accomplice of handsome young Phillips Holmes in spending a crazy night on the gold spruce at Palm Beach. Unfortunately the role of Miss Carroll out of her strength and the lass who did well in "The Devil's Holiday," or she who did even better in "Laughter." At times in her new picture, the characterization is beyond her reach, but it must be admitted that in passages of the whoopee-making Miss Carroll is at her some as most ardent fan would wish her to be.

But even Mr. Holmes pair off superbly in their best-behaved Lochinvar clothes, is pleasant to see them coupled again in the movies. But the young man was did far better work in "The Criminal Code," takes a tumble as the lawbreaker in "Stolen Heaven." His performance lacks the virility of the other. Again he is the criminal; he steals $20,000. Wounded by a bullet, he is cared when Miss Carroll finds him in the street. She has just lost her job as a night club dancer. She defies the conventions and takes him to her room. The police come, she hides him. She lies for him, she fools the detectives. Then she assents to the young-sters plans for a honeymoon and off they go on a stolen money home made.

AND FAST FLIES the cash in the gay Paree to which the pair round off. This proves to be the best portion of the film and the only section in which naturalness creeps out. Though an interested suitor, Miss Carroll seeks to refill the purse by gambling. Out of the suggested winnings that he brings her, she suggests paying back the stolen funds. Enter the police and Mr. Holmes has chosen "facing the music" in prison, to flight. So the end comes with Miss Carroll very much in love, prepared to wait the years through for her beloved to come to her, a free man.

There is dramatic value to some of the plot; in other hands it could have been made vibrant, gripping, tensely appealing. As acted, "Stolen Heaven" becomes chiefly a Nancy Carroll photoplay, which is sufficient for that host of admirers of hers. The only convincing and finished role is that played by Louis Calhern. The photography and direction are satisfactory.

THE LIVELY and able Benny Meroff and his band are [illegible] for the Paramount-Publix [illegible] Metropolitan, beginning today. Meroff has new things to do, and he does them well. Mr. Geisel has [illegible] and Mr. Martel at the organ are other fine features of the bill.

"Seed"

Lois Wilson has been added to the cast of Universal's new picture featuring John Boles and Genevieve Tobin. John M. Stahl will direct.

LORETTA YOUNG AND RONALD COLMAN

INDIANS HONOR DIX, STAR OF 'CIMARRON'

Meet heap big new Indian brave, Gawani Owen!

That's Richard Dix's new status and new name which in English means Big Heart.

At a cheerful pow wow recently with several thousand Indians of all the tribes in attendance, the Indio Pictures' star was initiated into the Kaw Tribe, given the blessings of the Great Spirit as I presented with a Linkert symbol being the future protecting of the race.

The honor was conferred upon Dix, according to White Eagle, Chief Yonkie and Moon Beam, assistant chief of hawwho conducted the ceremony, because of his fine characterizations of the Indians in former pictures, and his kindness to the Indians who visited for past few months while [illegible] Cimarron which is now showing at RKO Keith's.

Guests of honor at the ceremonial included many film luminaries, among them Wesley Ruggles, Irene Dunne, Estelle Taylor, George Stone, Stanley Fields and Rosco Ates, all of whom had a hand in the making of "Cimarron."

MENJOU ALSO IN FILM CAST

It was Charlie Chaplin who "discovered" Adolphe Menjou. After the war, when Menjou was playing bits and small parts, here, there and everywhere, trying to gain a foothold in motion pictures, Chaplin gave him a role of the French gentleman in "The Woman of Paris."

Chaplin selected him for the part because he looked like a Frenchman, acted like a Frenchman and wore his clothes like a boulevardier.

In "New Moon," now at Loew's Orpheum, Menjou is seen in support of Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore.

Chaplin Composes Music for Film

Music composed by Charles Spencer Chaplin, musician as well as comedian, will be featured on the sound track of the long-awaited silent "City Lights," Chaplin is synchronizing it on his lead ten different instruments.

Noah Beery

Noah Beery has been assigned a heavy role in George Arliss' new Warner picture, tentatively titled "The Ruling Passion," which John Adolfi will direct.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

When Poor Man Loves

IT WAS JUST impossible to imagine Mr. Nussbaum in the role of Cupid. Never had there been the slightest touch of romance in his life. Love had passed him by; human sympathy had dried within him, and his 60-odd years found him a cross, crabbed, constantly-complaining man who lived for himself alone.

To make up for it, he had several million dollars to which he added each year, and he had a house and an office between which he rotated in an unvarying routine.

But this morning Mr. Nussbaum somehow felt different. He couldn't have explained it just what way he felt different except that somehow he realized that the sky was blue, that the air was soft and scented, and that it was good to be alive. He relaxed a little on the soft cushion of the limousine that was taking him to his office and almost smilingly looked about him.

His eyes rested on the familiar broad back of his chauffeur in the front seat, and if he could have looked through that back he would have seen a face set in stubborn misery. It would have surprised Mr. Nussbaum, the leader on the floor of Tom Shelton, his chauffeur. For Tom had quarreled with his girl and was afraid he was going to lose her. And all on account of Mr. Nussbaum.

"If you really wanted to take me you could get the day off," Alice Conway had told Tom the night before. "And if you don't do it," she added, "I can find somebody who will. Jack Smallwood has been begging me to go riding with him. He doesn't have any trouble getting off."

"But I can't do it, I tell you," Tom had answered. "Old man Nussbaum would drop dead if I asked him for a day off to take a girl out. Then he'd come to life again and fire me. And jobs aren't easy to get these days."

It was bad enough to have Alice pass him up. But to go with Jack Smallwood—that was more Tom knew why Smallwood had so much leisure time. His bootlegging activities weren't so exacting that he couldn't take a day off now and then.

But chauffeur for Mr. Nussbaum—that was different. Mr Nussbaum's chauffeur had his Sundays off and that was all.

Then, as Tom gritted his teeth and hoped for the best, Mr. Nussbaum leaned forward and tapped on the glass.

It was an hour later that Alice heard the doorbell of her home ring. She was in her room, already regretting her action in accepting an invitation from Smallwood, who even then was waiting for her

Alice heard her mother go to the door and a few moments later the sound of voices came to her room—Smallwood's voice and then Tom's voice.

"I don't care whether you've got a date with her or not," Tom was saying. "I'm telling you to be on your way while you can walk. And don't let me catch you around here again, see. Don't even walk on the same side of the street with her. If you're not, and if I catch you at it I'm going to kick you down a hole."

Alice heard the door open and close and then Tom's voice sounded again, lower this time. He was speaking to her mother.

"Of course Alice doesn't know it, Mrs. Conway," he said, "but that fellow Smallwood is a bad egg. Just let me know if he shows up here again and I'll knock him loose from his ears. And now will you please tell Alice I'm here and that I've got old man Nussbaum's bus outside and that I want to take her for a ride."

Alice could hardly believe what she heard. It was startling enough to have Tom appear after he had said he couldn't get off. But to have him arrive with his employer's automobile to take her riding. Something must have happened

Even when Tom met her and led her out to the shiny limousine she didn't quite believe it But until later, when they were riding slowly through the park and she was sure that Mr. Nussbaum wasn't going to pop up from the back seat and glare at her in speechless anger, did she relax and finally believe it Then she snuggled closer to Tom

"I'm sorry," she said, "I—I heard what you said to Jack Smallwood and I won't see him any more."

Tom placed a hand over hers "You're right, that you're not," he said. "You're not going to see anybody but me. I've had an understanding with Mr. Nussbaum. I can't imagine what's come over the old boy. He told me to take the car and give my girl a ride. Can you imagine that? I nearly dropped dead."

"But where is he?" asked Alice

"Wait a minute," said Tom, "and I'll show you. I was driving him to the office this morning. He told me to drive him through the park."

Suddenly Tom stopped the car. "There, he is," he said

Alice looked and looked again.

There was Mr. Nussbaum, sitting on a park bench gazing benevolently at a dozen children running and shouting as they played ball.

There he was, Cupid as an elderly man who had suddenly realized why he felt "different" under the thawing sun of the first day of spring

More Color in the Costume

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—There'll be plenty of chance for the color-loving woman to indulge herself this spring. Because combinations of color make the smartest spring costumes.

And with that statement goes a word of warning . . . that these combinations of color are pleasant ones, when they're in fashion. Not crazy or wild. No such combinations as bright red and purple, for example, or bright red and bright green

There are at least five good ways to put together one of these colorful new costumes and be sure it's pleasant to look at. And they're all easy ways

(1) The dark costume with light accessories. A typical example of this method (but, remember, there are many more) is to start with a black or navy coat and dress with trimming of white.

A black dress with a white cowl draping, perhaps, and a black coat with a white fur scarf collar. With this could be combined a white hat and white gloves, black shoes and black handbag, with stockings in a neutral shade of taupe

Or if your navy dress and coat happen to be trimmed with beige instead of white, then beige hat and gloves could be substituted.

(2) Three shades of one color. This is an easy way, too. And here's just one example of how it can be done.

Three Blues

Starting with a navy coat, combine with it a dress of lighter navy trimmed with a pastel blue, navy shoes and handbag to match the coat, a hat in the navy of the coat but trimmed with a bit of the lighter navy of the dress.

The stockings and gloves of this costume would match each other in a neutral beige that blends with the blue of the costume. And pearl jewelry would give the right finish Not blue jewelry. As that would be monotonous

(3) Harmonizing shades of different colors. This way requires a little more planning, but it still is easy. Just one of many smart combinations would be a jacket costume of that lovely new shade, bittersweet, a color that looks just like the bittersweet berries you find in the fall

The blouse of such a suit could be a soft, flesh pink. And brown hat, bag and shoes would add the third harmonizing but different shade. Stockings and gloves of beige would match each other and blend nicely with the other three colors

(4) Contrasting shades of three colors. Still more thought is needed for this combination Because you have to plan for pleasant contrasts, if you're to be in fashion

Brown, Beige, Turquoise

Here's a way, starting with a jacket dress whose skirt and jacket are brown and whose bodice section is beige And the third contrasting color is turquoise You can put it into the jewelry you wear with this costume. Or if the dress or jacket has a girdle, the girdle might be brown lined or twisted with turquoise.

Then with brown hat, shoes and bag and beige stockings and gloves, your costume is of three contrasting, but pleasantly contrasting, colors

(5) A neutral coat with a bright dress. This again is an easy way. A gray coat, for instance worn with a bittersweet dress and black hat, shoes, bag and gloves Or a beige coat—in which case hat, shoes, bag and gloves would be brown. And taupe-beige stockings with either combination

Of course, none of these five ways is as easy as making a costume that matches in every detail. But aren't you just a little tired of that kind of costume?

Fats Most Vital to Health

By DR. COPELAND.

ONE OF the problems of the World War was the difficulty of European nations to supply the citizens with sufficient quantities of fat. When you stop to think about it, you will be astonished at what an important place fat has in the human diet. Butter, butter substitutes, olive oil, fats of meat, what would cooking be without them? No housewife would know what to do if she could not have an unlimited supply.

In recent years there has been an increased use of the vegetable oils. Of these there are many. All the nuts, particularly cocoanut, coconut butter, Cotton seeds, soya beans and corn are rich in oil

Without fats the body would shrink and become emaciated. The joints would lose their flexibility, the eyelids would harden and lose their sparkle. The whole surface of the body would be ruined

Without heat, the functions of the body would disappear. We would become like men and women who have been frozen

Heat is produced by the burning in the body of the fuel foods Chief of these in heat development are the various fats

There is a much greater use for the vegetable oils than has been appreciated by many housewives. For frying and the making of pastries they deserve greater popularity. Corn oil, for instance, is one of the most wholesome, nutritious and appetizing of all the fats

Olive oil is in daily use in parts of Europe and the East. It is employed there as butter and lard are used here

Stocks Rise Toward 1929 Panic Lows

Utilities Do Best; Rails Worst; Is New Spurt Desirable?

By B. C. Forbes

New York, Feb. 13—Although many do not like to think so, it is a fact that cheerfulness in Wall Street has a stimulating influence on business, on agricultural prices, on practically the whole nation. And, of course, depression in Wall Street also has equally widespread influences.

That is one reason why events in the stock market are of far-reaching importances in our national life.

B. C. Forbes

How do stock market values compare today with those recorded at the height—or depth—of the 1929 panic?

The writer then recommended the purchase, not on margin but outright, of good stocks on the theory that past experience had proven that such action had always been profitable.

The writer frankly confesses that he did not then feel that the inevitable business depression would drag along for so great a period nor that stocks would sink so far below their panic lows.

Do stocks purchased at the panic bottom in 1929 show today losses or gains?

Speaking broadly, industrials on Wednesday sold very close to the 1929 minimum; utilities show more advance than declines; railroads are lower.

It so happens that this column has long regarded utilities as distinctly more promising than rails. Looking ahead five or 10 years, there is no profound reason for expecting them to do as well as strong public utility and ably-managed industrial corporations. On the other hand, oils have proved a distinct disappointment.

* * *

The following table gives the 1929 panic low for representative industrial and miscellaneous companies, the highs registered on Wednesday, and the percentages:

"What do you think of the market's sudden rise?" I am daily asked.

It would have been better, in my opinion, if the market had moved more slowly and less spectacularly. Outbursts of abnormal bullishness accompanied by extraordinary swelling of activity, often peter out over night, often prove only a flash in the pan.

However, even such a demonstration as this latest is distinctly more encouraging than a fresh downswing would have been. We have had more than enough of bearish mass, more than enough of liquidation.

Anything calculated to inspire a modicum of cheerfulness is to be welcomed.

It still remains true that what needs changing most of all is our state of mind. If Wall Street can do that—and it assuredly will, now or later—then, bless it!

$19,193,570 Sales Reported by Kroger

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. reported for the four weeks ended Jan. 31, the first four weeks of its fiscal year, sales totaling $19,193,570. Because of the 13-period business year recently adopted, an exact comparison with last year was not available.

STOCK-MINDED PUBLIC ACTIVE IN TRADING

By FRANK H. McLOON

The stock-minded public is again actively trading. Wall and Board Streets in the past few days have been treated to an unexpected fanning of the emotions fire which has been smoldering more or less since the middle of December. From an inactive and featureless affair of a million shares or so a day, transactions on the big board have leaped to an average of approximately 4,500,000 shares daily with sensations skyrocketing in prices of a few closely-held specialties and more moderate upswing in standard utilities industrials and rails.

The huge influx of speculative and investment buying of stock in this period is apparently based on the favorable reports in industry, trade and politics.

The wise ones in Wall Street, however, are still puzzled as to whether the move is a genuine country-wide shopping rush for stocks, or merely a manipulation and a powerful "drive against the shorts" are playing the major role.

* * *

The marks of the organized bulls are plainly seen in the 10 and 20-point rushes put over in so many specialties, but the situation is entirely different in stocks of huge capitalizations as U. S. Steel, General Motors and the Standard Oils, with from 8,000,000 to 45,000,000 shares outstanding.

* * *

Wall and State are particularly pleased this week with increasing evidences of willingness of Congress to co-operate with industry and business to the extent of finish ing legislative and relief programs and shutting up shop as soon as possible. From all parts of the country have come demands that Congress finish its work by March in order that there may be peace and quiet in the halls of the national legislature from all that time until December.

* * *

Montgomery Ward is an issue on which I hear interests formerly enrolled among the favorable bears have lately turned bullish. Their change of heart is based on things which haven't yet come to light, but which in due time are to be made known, they declare.

The most strenuous market performances this year to date appear to have been directed from Chicago.

Growing importance as a financial center of the Windy City which, as pointed out in this column several months ago, is now attracting prominent financiers to send their sons to Chicago. Horace Greeley exhorted, "Go West," and another adviser of youth, with "Go West, young man, go West." The only time he followed his own counsel was when he moved from New Hampshire to Vermont, which was not, strictly speaking, in the direction, although not very far.

* * *

J. I. Case and Auburn Auto activities are reported to have been largely directed from Chicago. The so-called Coolidge bull market had a number of its leaders out of the Great Lakes sector.

They say that in Wall St. it is not always the unexpected that happens. A few months ago J. I. Case was very widely tipped to rise to dizzy heights by the end of 1930. Instead of justifying the tips, it plummeted in the other direction. Again this week it has been picked by the tipsters to outshine Auburn Auto as the market's outstanding upside performer.

* * *

All the bearish rumors recently circulated are just as true as they ever were; yes, just as true but no more so.

Continental Oil to Erect a Large Plant

Continental Oil Co. has awarded contract for Ponca City, Okla., distilling plant to Alco Products, Inc., division of American Locomotive Co. Plant will have capacity of 3000 barrels a day and will be ready for operation July 1.

Electricity Cuts Copper Range Cost

Copper Range has cut costs since connecting all of its various operations with the transmission lines of the Copper District Power Co., in which it has a half interest. It is finding the power constant and satisfactory in every respect.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Familiar leaders of recent market sessions again held sway in today's fluctuations in Wall Street. J. I. Case was strong most of the session. The news on the company was that directors will meet at Racine, Wis., February 18, to discuss action on the dividend due April 1.

Hupp Is Easier With Announcement

Hupp, recent leader of the low-priced motor shares, was a little easier today following announcement that Hupp Motor Car Co today reported net loss of $922,765 for 1930. This contrasts with net profit of $3,868,926, or $2.35 a share, in 1929. The "street" realizes this represents only "water past the mill wheels."

Pennsylvania Is Sold Unchanged

Pennsylvania Railroad sold unchanged most of today's session in announcing that Penn stockholders at their annual meeting April 14 would be asked to increase the indebtedness of the company. It was explained that the increase would permit the directors to issue and dispose of bonds or other obligations from time to time to the aggregate of $150,000,000.

Eastman Kodak Helps Employes

Eastman Kodak continues to show progressive leadership. Purchasing power of the employes of Eastman will be enhanced through the decision of the board of directors in ordering immediate payment of wage dividends amounting to $1,618,803, due from three to six months hence.

American Woolen Attracts Attention

Considerable long-range buying has been taking place in the securities of the American Woolen Co. New interests have gone into the company and are taking an active hand in its management. The company has a strong balance sheet, having cash amounting to around $25 a share on the preferred stock, which is selling around 33. Talk has been heard in the "street" of a plan for liquidating the accrued preferred dividends, but apparently nothing has been done.

Woolen Employs More Workers

The woolen industry is somewhat improved. The American company is employing more workers in some mills than in many months.

Radio Position Seen Reversed

The radio industry is looking for a better 1931 than 1930. Buying of Radio Corp. common has been transacted recently by persons who were sellers last year. They are looking for considerably higher prices for all the company's securities.

Drug Outlook Brings Buyers

Substantial buying of Drug Inc. has taken place in the last few days on the belief that 1931 will be a good year for the company. It is estimated that the company earned about $6 a share on the junior shares in 1930, and will show a strong balance sheet.

COPPER SHARES ARE ACTIVE IN BOSTON

Copper shares were active features in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. The metal issues were dull in the forenoon part of the session, but firmed in later trading.

Quincy Mining and Anaconda each sold around a point higher. Old Colony Railroad, one of the inactive stocks, sold 3 points higher. Union Twist Drill was 2¼ higher.

American Telephone, Edison, New England Telephone and Torrington each lowered a point. Eastern Gas & Fuel common was around a point lower while the prior preferred was around 2 points higher.

Boston Elevated gained 1¼ and Atchison was 1¾ higher. Gillette and United Shoe each gained fractionally.

Directors of Revere Copper & Brass Co., which traces back to founding by Paul Revere, American patriot, have omitted the quarterly dividend of $1 on the class "A" stock due at this time. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the preferred was authorized.

C. D. Dallas was elected president of the company, F. H. Bronnell, chairman of the finance committee, and Barton Haselton, chairman of the board. George H. Allen was elected chairman of the executive committee.

Arizona Commercial Mining Co. declared an initial dividend of $1 a share in liquidation, payable February 28 to stock of record February 21.

INSURANCE

Women Need Insurance as Well as Men Fortunes Exposed to Great Many Risks Independence Is Greatest Feature

—By Frank F. Loomis—

Life insurance is less general among women than among men, and yet there are many women particularly those of independent means or wealth, who are supporting themselves or helping support others, who have the same reasons for insuring as have influenced husbands, fathers and brothers to secure insurance protection.

The wealthy woman, as well as the wealthy man, may become poor some day. Fortunes are exposed to many risks, and sometime shrink or pass away. Practically everyone can recall such a case within her personal knowledge—and possibly the case of a friend or a relative.

The rich woman should carry a generous-sized endowment insurance policy, providing that upon maturity the proceeds shall be applied to the purchase of a life income. This is a wise precaution against possible misfortune in the future. The wealthy woman wants insurance for other purposes as well as for income protection.

She may wish to endow a hospital, a church or a college, or to make provisions for family servants or other dependents or provide for certain benevolent and charitable objects without including the estates in her will. These things can be accomplished by means of life insurance and in such a way that her desire for quick settlement without diminuation in amount to her beneficiaries will be met as it could be met in no other way.

The woman who is self-supporting also needs life insurance. Often she is supporting someone besides herself—an aged mother, an invalid sister, or perhaps the child of a relative who died uninsured or she may be a widow with her own children to support.

That woman certainly needs life insurance! With existing demands upon her limited income, she has have difficulty paying the premiums on how are those who are dependent upon her to subsist should her own death terminate the income which is their sole maintenance. She must carry life insurance. It will take a little of her income to pay the premiums but there will still be more of it left upon her death than there would be if she were to die uninsured.

The policy that will doubtless fit a case such as this is the ordinary life form, which furnishes the largest protection for the amount of money she is able to pay.

The self-supporting woman, who has no one dependent on her, nevertheless has her own future to provide for. She no doubt desires to save but finds it difficult to do so. It is well to adopt some plan that will oblige her to save. The solution is the systematic, semi-compulsory plan of life insurance, which requires the regular deposit of fixed sums at specified dates in the form of a life insurance policy's premiums.

The system is semi compulsory because failure to pay a premium when due involves some sacrifice or other disadvantage, although not a sacrifice of all the money she has deposited. Thus she acquires the habit of saving—a habit that is not likely to be abandoned.

Life insurance enables a woman who has no dependents, to remain herself independent of everyone, the fact that she is building an estate and that she can by her insurance provide a sure income in case of disability, strengthens her faith in herself and enables her to face the future with courage and confidence.

OILS IN LEAD OF AFTERNOON DEALINGS

New York, Feb. 13.—Long-neglected oil shares were brought forward in afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange today. Moderate gains were recorded.

Oils took the lead after the way to higher prices had been blocked in other sections by persistent selling by professionals and outside traders.

GRAINS ARE LOWERED

Weakness in the grain markets, with wheat and corn down more than 2 cents a bushel, unsettled the stock market at times in the forenoon, but this was considered a move to bring our midgets in line with Canadian and Liverpool prices established yesterday during the American holiday.

The impetuous recovery showed considerable recession from the tit of the pre-holiday sessions. The closing was irregular. Net changes showed in a number of pivotal issues that had fallen to be influenced by the rally in the oil shares.

Stocks off about a point included U. S. Steel, General Electric, American Can, DuPont, North American, Air Reduction and Gillette. Westinghouse was up a point. Miscellaneous shares eased after their rally of a point or two. Sales approximated 3,100,000 shares.

STRENGTH OF COPPER

The strength of copper shares was evidently a further response to the half-cent-a-pound increase in red metal prices to 10 cents earlier in the week. Numbering the shortlived upturns in price, from 9½ to 12 cents last November, the industry is apparently determined to go slowly.

Credit conditions were tranquil, with call money still available at 1 per cent in the outside market. Wall Street seemed inclined to take an optimistic view of the compromise soldier bonus measure, even though it might necessitate some government financing.

The address in Paris by Gates H. McGarrah, president of the Bank of International Settlements, urging the resumption of private banks of long-term foreign lending by both Paris and New York, was met with an upbidding of foreign bonds in this market.

ACTION OF OILS

The strength of the oil shares seemed to reflect little save a professional move against shorts as a group. The first tendency of gasoline prices in the East was counterbalanced by a cut of 2 cents a gallon initiated by a standard of Indiana in the Chicago area.

In the meantime, the industry remained unsettled by the beginning of new reserves in eastern Texas, controversies over pro-ration and a demand for a tariff.

The report of electric power production for the first week of February showed a somewhat larger than seasonal decline. On the other hand, the Department of Interior's report on power production during 1930 was mildly encouraging, showing a drop of only 1 per cent, year, 1929, of less than 2 per cent.

U. S. Government bonds reflected with higher prices the Washington statements that a new government financing would be necessary in connection with the raising of the loan volume on soldiers' certificates.

Bar Silver Falls to Its Late Low

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—Bar silver in New York today lost all of its gains of earlier in the week and fell back to its historical low of 28¼ cents an ounce, established last Saturday. Drop of 1¼ cents in the price of metal today was one of the sharpest breaks of recent months.

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Feb. 13 (INS)—Grains closed lower today. Wheat was down ¼ to 1½c, corn 1¾ to 1¾c and oats ¾ to ⅞c. Rye was ¼ to ⅜c off.

China and Postal Fresh Pact Near

Announcement is expected soon of Chinese Government and Postal Telegraph & Cable Corp. renewal of Pacific landing privileges in China for 14-year period. Contract expired Dec. 30, 1930, and Nanking government refused to grant more than preliminary agreement for renewal.

N. & W. Ordered to Refund Millions

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—An order requiring the Norfolk & Western Railroad to pay the Government $15,849,344 out of its alleged excess earnings dividends in 1922 and 1926 was issued today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

United Engineering Profits Increased

Net profit of United Engineering & Foundry Co. for 1930 is equal, after preferred dividends, to $4.38 a share in 416,218 shares of common, against $3.78 a share in 1929.

Bond Offerings of Week Are $55,151,000

New bond offerings for the week totaled $55,151,000 against $21,225,000 last week and $150,465,000 for the like week last year.

Seat on Exchange Sells Up $50,000

CURB ABSORBS INTERMITTENT PROFIT-TAKING

New York, Feb. 13—Intermittent profit taking accompanied a decrease in volume of trading on the Curb Market today.

Net changes from Wednesday's closing were small, with a smattering of narrow declines offsetting generally unimpressive advances in some sections of the list. Bullish operators appeared content to rest on their oars; on the other hand, stocks showed good resistance to realizing, which discouraged moves for a technical reaction.

Sluggishness of the utilities at the opening found some stock ready for sale, and there was an inactive early decline. Sponsors of the advance supported their favorites, however, and the group rallied from the early lows, although progress beyond the final quotations of the previous session was difficult.

American & Foreign Power warrants managed to gain a point, while Electric Bond & Share fluctuated moderately on both sides of parity.

Oils sagged during most of the day. Specialties were mostly firm. Deere, Stutz, Graham-Paige and Ford Ltd. were steady. Newmont Mining lost a couple of points.

NEWS OF THE PORT OF BOSTON

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Ban on the captain and crew of the Norwegian steamer Lorenz W. Hansen, now tied up at the American Sugar Refinery, South Boston, denying them shore leave because their passports were used by a consular agent instead of a consul, was lifted by the State Department at Washington today.

United States immigration authorities in Boston, who queried the State Department relative to their status when a local boarding officer ordered them detained on board, were notified that the passport validity was recognized by the State Department.

Detention order was revoked and the captain and his crew given the freedom of the port.

After finishing unloading her car of sugar, the steamer is awaiting another charter here.

LIVESTOCK SHIPMENT

A livestock shipment and four sea lions will be taken out with a general cargo in the U. S. Shipping Board steamer Ossining, assigned to the Yankee Line, which is at Moseae Tunnel Docks, Charlestown. She will sail tomorrow afternoon. She takes 16,000 bushels of grain and 1200 tons of general cargo.

TRANSFER CASE

Transfer to Boston by New Haven inspectors of the action by the federal government on the grounding of the steamer William N. Page places the decision up to local inspectors of steam vessels. Testimony of officers has been taken, but no decision has been made.

GOOD SHOWING

An excellent total for the week end ing today was brought into the fish pier by nine vessels who checked up 540,000 pounds of mixed groundfish in receipts recorded.

NEW ENGLAND APPLES

Boston is continuing to show a marked increase in the shipment of apples to foreign countries over last year. During January, a total of 7,567 packages were exported to Great Britain and Germany. The total shipments for the season were 48,813 barrels and 41,779 boxes.

DRAG FOULS

Fouling of a wire drag, which caught in the propeller, punching a hole near the wheel, caused the auxiliary dragger Aloma of Gloucester to fill up and sink off Nantucket, Capt. Wallace Walker stated. Captain and crew of the ill-fated fishermen are now in Gloucester casting about for new berths.

The Legislature's Part

It Can Solve Prison Problem by Rushing Completion of Norfolk Buildings

A representative of the Boston Evening American has inspected Charlestown State Prison from cellar to attic.

In other columns of this newspaper you will read his observations of this first examination of the interior of this antiquated prison which has been authorized and permitted in this generation.

He describes it as being desperately overcrowded in violation of all the modern rules of safety, health and sanitation.

In excess of 960 prisoners are jammed into this archaic institution, 125 years old, which was constructed to accommodate only 750 prisoners in extraordinary emergency.

Three and four prisoners are thrust into and live in "cave-like" cells, each cell none too large for one man.

The workshops, the chapel and the other structures of this prison colony are described as being fire-traps, a condition which is admitted by the prison and the fire officials.

Its disgusting sanitation system, or lack of it, including the "bucket system" for personal cleanliness in the cells, is as primitive as London Tower and the death castle of Nuremburg.

Prisoners who incur fatal, contagious illnesses there are moved out to other institutions ere death in order that its lamentable mortality rate may be concealed.

Its kitchens are unable to produce the normal amount of food required for the prisoners, so great is the congestion.

This newspaper prides itself upon its accuracy as well as upon its aggressiveness. But if there happens to be anyone who doubts the existence of these disgraceful, indefensible and intolerable conditions, let him read the appeal of Warden Hogsett, who, fearing the "evident dangers of this very serious situation" pleads to the State to supply the needed remedies at once.

Or let him read the report of the special committee, headed by Mr. Edwin S. Webster, of Stone & Webster, one of the greatest engineering firms in the world, which said:

"The Committee wishes to say that no human being is bad enough to deserve confinement in such a place or dangerous enough to need it."

At Charlestown, we have dangerous overcrowding, all the elements of a fire-trap and a death-trap, all the idleness and sources of mental contamination which expand criminality—in short, all the conditions which led to the horror of the Columbus Penitentiary less than a year ago when 330 human beings perished in the holocaust.

The immediate remedy lies in rushing the Norfolk Prison Colony to completion, in order that the inmates may be transferred there from the evil conditions of Charlestown.

It is no time to be worrying about "pay-as-you-go" policies when un-Christian and inhumanitarian abominations are permitted to exist with all the barbarous psychology of the fifteenth century.

The Legislature should provide for Norfolk every dollar that is needed.

Hardboiled

But Effective

Customs differ in different countries.

T. I. Mardy Jones, Labor member of the British Parliament, went from London to Wales a while ago to help arbitrate a coal strike. He traveled on an official railroad pass, made out to him in his parliamentary capacity and non-transferable. Then he found that he needed an important document from London. Not wishing to entrust it to the mails, he wrote his wife to bring it to him and thoughtlessly inclosed his pass for her to use. She used it.

Mr. Jones is 52 years old. He is a self-made man, rising from a pit boy in the mines to an honored position. He worked his way through Oxford, became an authority on industrial problems, was a member of the Royal Society of Economists and has been an important figure in Parliament since 1922.

But now the inexorable British law steps in. Jones has been fined, forced to quit Parliament, and the career which he has built up so carefully and laboriously is in ruins.

Over here, it is unlikely that Mr. Jones would have been hurt much by his little slip. We are less squeamish, or more good natured, than the English in matters of this kind.

Good nature is a fine quality, but expensive when allowed to defeat justice. The British are not willing to pay the price. We, however, usually are.

New York Day by Day -:- Thoughts as I Stroll -:- By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—Thoughts while strolling: What became of milk crocks? One thing about a business depression, the best people can't escape it. Moe Ducore scurrying along. Few women use water on their faces any more. Broadway's sky glow—like the fume of an eternal fire.

Kent Cooper, a Columbus, Ind., boy, who made good in the city. Silk house robes for little boys. Ash trays in agate. And a beauty in jade with rubies. Noel Coward looks a flop eared country boy. But is London's most polished sophisticate. In a silk hat, you'd take Eddie Guest for Mayor Walker.

If I were a young bean I'd trot after Eva Le Gallienne like a dog following a covered wagon. Never hear about Babbitts any more. Except in the American Mercury. Helen Hayes and Charles MacArthur. The Chrysler silver tower will glitter seven years without cleaning.

Al E. Smith's office is on the 80th floor of the Empire Building. Also the offices of John Raskob, Pierre du Pont and Louis G. Kaufman. Brooklyn has the second largest hotel in the world. The largest is the Stevens in Chicago. They don't sprinkle nutmeg on New York milk shakes.

Dr. Abraham Flexner, of the Rockefeller foundation, resembles a lanky, backwoods parson. But can talk millionaires out of millions for philanthropy. Those austere elderly clerks in big jewelry establishments. The noble old Roman—Jack Curley.

Cafe sign: "Try our Tom Collins." A Great Dane in an Austin. Robert Ripley is, b. l. o. n, growing bald. Those brisk haberdashery owners always in boxes at the ball game or in ringside seats at Garden fights. What happened to Harry Wills, the colored boxer?

The ultima thule in shop name: "Mon Petit Salon Intime." Leo Newman, the ticket agency man. The Loew theaters are always celebrating an anniversary. Those corner loafers who shoot away like frightened trout when a cop turns the corner. Girls you just know would buy baby leopard coats.

From a cabaret ad: "Dance on a satin smooth floor to an orchestra that simply keeps your feet curveting?" Sounds like kidetting?

Newest in handkerchiefs is a mentholated invention of extra soft linen. Grand for sniffles.

As the curtain falls on an act at a big comedy hit, a frantic wife and mother murmurs: "Incest, incest!" Which gives an idea of comedy plots this season.

The other day I met one of those model babies reared by rote to a healthy flapperdom. She had been fed by the tick of the clock, properly balanced in calories, soothed with violet rays and bounced mathematically. In a precise sort of way she was fairly good looking yet to me she did not have the grace, clear eyes and eggshell complexion of a tenement born child, nurtured in slum doorways and on sunless fire escapes, who sells newspapers on upper Lexington ave.

This Lexington ave. girl, incidentally, wants to be a newspaper writer. But tells me her boy friend objects seriously. He is a little sweatered mug — a preliminary fighter of the type who socks some opponent to sleep and shouts over the radio: "Hello, Mama! I'll be right home!" He hangs around her newspaper hutch constantly. Recently I asked him why he objected to journalism as a feminine career. "Dem dames," he replied, "know too much about grammer and not enough about cookin'."

There is a rugged, rowdy quality about the ham-and-egg "prelim" boys that appeals. But they rarely get anywhere. Many hang out in a 9th avenue hamburger joint near the Garden. Each believes he is a potential Dempsey, who is still their idol. They are an unusual assortment of pluggulies who neither drink nor smoke. Indeed they live far more decently than the average youth in any social strata.

From a morning paper: "She was the friskiest mount on the bridle path and he was the best dressed rider. Suddenly the mare took the bit and bolted."

Hold her, Newt, she's a stable horse.

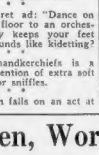
Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

How Come?

CLARA BOW, as you know, hired a gal called Daisy De Voe.

Maybe that sounds like poetry, but what follows isn't.

Clara got mad at Daisy. Summoned her into court on an embezzlement charge. Daisy came—on high—with a little grip filled with letters, telegrams and other incendiary evidence from erstwhile lovers—and a trial that was to have been Daisy's became Clara's. Why was Daisy allowed to produce her purloined telegrams and letters? Why couldn't Clara have lovers and letters if she wished? What had that to do with an embezzlement charge? Nobody seems to know. But it's plainly evident that Daisy got plenty even with Clara, in spite of the fact that the court gave her 18 months.



Elsie Robinson

Says Harry Richman, once Clara's fiance:

"Here's Daisy, accused of embezzling $16,000 from Clara—accused by Clara of attempting to obtain $125,000 from her fo. her letters and telegrams. And what happens? Daisy brings these letters and telegrams into court—and it's Clara that's got to do the explaining, not Daisy. How come?"

And plenty of others are echoing —"how come?"

We don't know Daisy or Clara. We don't know whether Daisy twotimed Clara or Clara two-timed Daisy, and what's more, we don't care a hoot. But we would like to know how come that our courts can be used for any such squawkfest.

As taxpayers we support those courts, you and I. If Clara's sobs and Daisy's snorts cost the state $50,000 or more, you and I have to dig that $50,000 out of our pockets. We may have spent years of hard labor accumulating that wad. We may have led thrifty, disciplined lives, and have the liveliest contempt for brawls and brawlers, but that makes no difference—we must come across.

Public trials—which once existed for the purpose of Justice—have now become one of the most popular and pernicious rackets. If I get mad at you, for any real or imaginary grievance, I can charge you with any crime under heaven, drag you into court, and you'll have to prove yourself innocent. But what happens to your reputation and the taxpayers' money during that procedure?

There was that case of the old minister charged with misconduct by a malicious girl. The girl afterward confessed to perjury, but that didn't help the minister. Broken and shamed, he had killed himself.

And as for heart balm and alimony grafting—there's no end to what a bright girl can accomplish with the backing of a sympathetic judge. Nor should we blame the judge. He is only doing what we expect him to do. He can't refuse to admit such cases to trial. Under our present arrangement, anyone may press any charge, however abominable and false.

What do you think of that arrangement? Isn't it possible to prevent such predatory raids? Couldn't we have committees to pass upon motives and charges before they are given expensive judicial consideration? Shall any peevish wee be allowed to use our courts and our money for his or her personal sticking game?

Blaming the Cat

England and Other Countries Do It

THE GUILTY FELINE

This picture, according to Lord Birkenhead's London newspaper, the Daily Express, shows the political situation in England.

Trade and industry have temporarily gone to smash—see the broken crockery in the foreground.

On the left, old Mother Britannia, looking at the wreckage asks, "Who did it?" The guilty one is indicated by outstretched arms and pointing fingers. THE CAT DID IT. And the cat is "world depression." You must not blame us, say the great ones. We never broke anything in our lives. All this wreckage is due to the cat.

But Great Britain has no monopoly of the "blame-the-cat" policy. It's an international weakness.

Here in America our public men also find it convenient to blame the cat—"world depression."

When things go well and prosperity reigns, the "great man" is responsible. He admits modestly that HE DID IT.

But when conditions change and prosperity walks out of sight around the corner, then the convenient cat "world depression" is called to act as scapegoat and bear the load.

You are told about "periodical recurrence of depression." China and India are blamed for not buying goods.

This particular little picture, aimed at the Labor Government in Britain, blaming its failures on the "cat," applies with equal accuracy to all governments, everywhere.

Throwing Mud at Heroes

Profitable, But Contemptible

The current epidemic of books, written for the purpose of bespattering American national heroes, has called forth a stinging statement from Ambassador Dawes.

The Ambassador, speaking from London, says:

"We are being flooded with popular narratives of history in which, for the purpose of selling books, the writer tells all the discreditable things he can find about the great men of the past. One of the crying needs of the day is for men who, in an impartial way, which can only be found in a man of perspective, will draw those generalizations which should be made from the events of history."

Sane Americans will agree with Mr. Dawes. They know that the outstanding figures of the nation were human beings, with human faults and weaknesses. They know that Washington could swear when swearing was necessary; that Lincoln was sometimes uncouth; that Grant drank whiskey now and then. These traits make their possessors seem more like creatures of flesh and blood and less like marble statues. But to dig up and publish every discreditable story that has ever been told about them, with little or no regard for their truth or falsity, is indefensible. The resulting portrait is a caricature of the real man and as misleading as some of the old style antobiographies which whitewashed their heroes completely.

There may be money in mud-throwing, but there can be nothing but widespread contempt for those that throw it.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Matrimonial Candidates

I HAVE never held with those modernists who howled for woman's right to do the courting and proposing. I have never even agreed with Bernard Shaw, who claims that woman DOES do the choosing, while poor, unsuspecting man is the passive victim in the matrimonial racket.

I have seen girls set out to capture a man by the go-getting method; but I have never seen it WORK. It is not Mrs. Grundy, but Nature — masculine nature — that puts the taboo on the pursuing woman. It's just a quirk of contrariness somewhere in his sub-consciousness which makes him lean back the moment a woman leaps forward.

But I DO believe that, if it were possible for women to do the selecting in marriage, it would be far more sanely and efficiently done. Because women like a man for what he IS and for what he can DO, not for what he pretends to be. Whereas ones take a woman at her face value and like her for what she APPEARS to be. That's why a woman's LOOKS are so important.

If a girl wears her hair like a madonna and has the manner of a sweet, modest violet, a man never stops to reflect that behind that lowly mask there may be a dumbbell or a hard-boiled egg. If a woman looks like a passionate houri or like a smart, snappy business girl, or like a cute baby-doll, a man will fall for the type at sight, and ask no questions.

* * *

But, as far as men are concerned, every woman is from Missouri. No big, well-fed male animal can bluff her into thinking him a "hero," unless he has a record to prove it.

A woman loves a man for his character and accomplishments, not for the way his hair curls back from his brow, or the way his lashes sweep his cheek.

She admires the strength, the prowess, the will and the skill that make a man a winner in battles or sports and a success in the business and professional world.

In school and college all the woman fall hopelessly in love with the conquering athlete who walks off with the game or the cup, not with the romantic looking boy who wears the prettiest necktie.

In the business office half the feminine force are in love with the keen, stern human-dynamo who puts over the big deals and whom they adoringly call "The Boss."

* * *

Women love strength and bravery and intelligence in men, and if they marry weaklings and playboys it is just because those were the only men who happened to be available. Husbands are like wedding gifts. You can't choose them; you just have to accept what comes your way and appear delighted.

It is MEN who do the choosing today, yesterday and forever. And, as long as they continue to pick a wife by the eye, marriage will be a lottery. But there! If women could do the choosing, all the NICE men would be married! And probably snapped up by the wrong girls!
